Vancouver Man Charged With Abduction of Girl

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police Wednesday laid three charges under the abduction section of the Criminal Code against 58-year-old Donald McKay in connection with the 24-hour disappearance of Lori Taylor, 8, a cerebral palsy and epilepsy victim who must take medicine three times a day.

Judge Says Minister Called Them Menace Vote by Jailed Tories Protested

OTTAWA (CP)—The question of alleged irregularities by Forestry Minister Sauve in the Nov. 8 federal election boiled up suddenly Wednesday at a press conference being given by Acting Prime Minister Martin.

Mr. Martin said he had been charged that day with threatening a Liberal.

Mr. Martin was asked whether Mr. Sauve had telephoned the judge in his riding, Ile-de-la-Madeleine, to have two Conservatives detained in jail.

Mr. Martin said he had heard about the matter but hadn't read the newspaper account in question.

Legal Ways

Mr. Martin added that there is a well-established legal procedure for anyone to take if he contends irregularities occurred during the election.

He was then asked what would happen if the persons making the allegations hadn't enough money to take the matter to court.

Mr. Martin said—jokingly—he didn't want to be asked more embarrassing questions. Later, a reporter asked if the government planned to start an investigation.

"I know nothing about the situation," Mr. Martin replied.

Another reporter said there had been criticism in the Rivard affair that the government hadn't started its own investigation and that the Opposition had had to disclose it.

Clean House

He asked whether it was still the government's view that the "other side" should "clean house" and not the government itself.

Mr. Martin said the question involves an allegation against a member of Parliament. There were well-known legal remedies to deal with the matter.

He added that he wouldn't want to leave the impression that the matter wasn't being looked at by the government.

"Is it?" he was asked.

Mr. Martin said he had made only an "observation."

Mr. Sauve now is in Rome attending a United Nations Food and Agriculture Conference.

On election day, fishermen Willie Lebel and Lucien Bourgeois were arrested as the result of a campaign fracas the previous night.

They were allowed out of prison to vote, then returned to their cells.

Britain Hopes to Send White Peace Force

UN MAY SEIZE DAM FOR DEBT

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain is working toward getting an international force to guard the power station on the Rhodesian side of the Kariba Dam, the authoritative Financial Times says.

The newspaper's foreign editor, writing in an early edition today, says a force composed mainly of British and other "white Commonwealth" troops, perhaps under United Nations auspices, is envisaged.

Zambia urgently appealed to Britain Wednesday for swift military action to neutralize the area around the Kariba Dam.

It is hoped that the British plan will satisfy President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and be acceptable to the breakaway Rhodesian leader, Ian Smith, the newspaper says.

Both will be sounded out by Sir Robert Menzies, the Australian prime minister, "as the Commonwealth statesman least objectionable to the Salisbury regime."

The newspaper says Whitehall circles argue that as Smith now has repudiated Rhodesia's obligation on the £23,600,000 ($70,800,000) World Bank loan for the Kariba project, the United Nations, of which the bank is an agency, is entitled to foreclose.

The UN would accomplish this by putting in troops to guard the Kariba installations, The Financial Times says.

"It is recognized, however, that blue berets (caps worn by soldiers in UN forces) are a red rag to a bull in Rhodesia," The Financial Times says. "So the force would be composed of white troops from Britain and the Commonwealth."

"It would thus provide a reassurance to Mr. Smith that there was no possibility of President Kaunda bringing in African troops, and thus provoking a racial clash across the Zambezi, which could result in the blowing up of the dam."

U.S. Hits Soviet 'Distortion'

New Viet Peace Push

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain is making a new effort to get early peace talks on Viet Nam started, informed sources said Wednesday.

The British government sent

Russia a draft message on the subject, the sources said.

They said Britain wants the message to be circulated by them jointly to the powers who attended the 1954 Geneva conference on Viet Nam. The source declined to disclose the contents of the draft.

Britain and Russia were co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina and Britain supports announced U.S. readiness for unconditional Viet Nam peace negotiations.

Warning System Fails

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson was told Wednesday that a power failure Tuesday night at Fort Hardy, B.C., knocked out an alternate air-raid warning system for 14 minutes. The primary continental warning system was not affected.

The report came from Stewart Brown, chief engineer of the Federal Power Commission, and Boyd Austin, chief of the commission's San Francisco office.

For about 30 minutes there was a loss of power at Fort Hardy to a microwave station, part of a network set up to warn of the approach of unidentified hostile planes. But the report said other channels were made available within 14 minutes for the alternate system.

Vietnamese Troops In Big Clash

SAIGON (CP)—Massed battalions of South Vietnamese government troops clashed with an estimated 2,000 Viet Cong guerrillas today in a pre-dawn battle about 355 miles north-east of here.

By mid-morning intense fighting was continuing, a U.S. military spokesman said.

No reports were available on casualties but it was thought here that they were heavy among the government force.

Britain has several times proposed to Russia a joint initiative to get Viet Nam peace talks going, but the Soviet government has replied by saying this is a matter for the North Vietnamese.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has deplored as "disappointing" what it called "the extreme distortion" in views expressed by Soviet Premier Khrushchev on current world events. (See Page 41.)

A state department press officer also said Wednesday that much of Khrushchev's criticism of U.S. policy in Viet Nam and of U.S. efforts to set up a NATO nuclear force including West Germany was essentially old stuff.

Two Islanders Badly Hurt

U.S. Sergeant Dies in Crash

COURTENAY—A United States Air Force staff sergeant, James E. Funkhouser of Ohio, was killed instantly when his sports car was involved in a head-on collision with another car Wednesday.

He was stationed at RCAF Station Comox.

Two persons were injured in the crash.

Carol Ann Manson of Courtenay, a passenger in the serviceman's car, was critically injured. She is in hospital at Comox.

The other driver involved was Ken Day, operator of a music store in Courtenay, who was seriously injured.

The sports car was driving south on the Island highway in heavy rain when it met Day's car head-on. The accident occurred at 3 p.m.

Children Will Share $10,000 Settlement

VANCOUVER (CP)—The two children of Mrs. Doris LeCorre of 1170 Palmer, Victoria, will receive $10,000 in an out-of-court settlement for the loss of their father in a 1964 target shooting accident.

The settlement, approved in Supreme Court Wednesday, followed a suit launched by Mrs. LeCorre against Gerritt Mol of Saanich, charging that her husband, Jean James Peakman, was killed by a bullet from a rifle fired by Mr. Mol near Leechtown Nov. 15, 1964.

Roland Johnson, counsel for Mrs. LeCorre, said Mr. Peakman was hunting with Mr. Mol and stopped to fire at a tin can. While returning to their firing position, Mr. Mol's rifle accidentally fired and the bullet struck Mr. Peakman in the spine.

He was dead on arrival at Duncan hospital.

Colonist 500 Fund

Turkeys for Toys Only Part of Story

Would you swap a toy, or two or three, for a Christmas turkey?

You can get at least a good chance on that free turkey and help the needy at Christmas, too.

All you have to do is bring some toys — one is actually enough — to the giant Kinsman Binge at the Arena Monday.

Handing in your toys at the door entitles you to a free ticket to be drawn on about 30 turkeys the Kinsmen are donating for this purpose to help the Colonist 500 Fund.

The Kinsmen are old friends of the 500 Fund, and this year their bingo is the biggest ever with about $10,000 in prize money and a new Pontiac for the big winner.

And this year — the 43rd year of the bingo — the Kinsmen are allowing a $500 consolation prize pot to be divided among the runners-up in the final car bingo.

The consolation prize, and the fun of bingo, of course, would be worth the price of admission alone. Tickets are

Bells Peal Historic Farewell

Vatican Council Ends with Send-Off by 200,000

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—"Goodbye, Goodbye," a group of waving nuns shouted over the pealing bells of the basilica as the council of bishops hurried out of St. Peter's Square Wednesday.

(See page 35.)

Minutes earlier Pope Paul VI had solemnly dismissed the ecumenical council fathers with the Latin words "Ite in Pace" — Go in Peace.

But the festive crowd of nearly 200,000 people that thronged St. Peter's Square for the closing ceremony gave the bishops of the world a more informal send-off with waves, smiles and farewells shouted in half a dozen languages.

During the nearly three-hour closing ceremony, the scene in St. Peter's Square had the stillness and solemnity of a medieval pageant.

crimson throne in front of the basilica.

On either side of him were the more than 2,000 white-robed council fathers, formally attired official delegations from many nations, and distinguished visitors.

Large as the gathering was, it was almost dwarfed by the massive facade of St. Peter's and the statues silhouetted against the sky that ring the basilica colonnade and the roof of the basilica.

In the vastness of St. Peter's Square white-clad nuns and camera-carrying tourists vied for a better view of the ceremony. Today's feast of the Immaculate Conception is a public holiday and Romans dressed in their Sunday best predominated in the crowd.

Pope Paul entered the square for the ceremony in his gestatorial chair, carried aloft on the shoulders of the

'No-Man's Land'

Zambezi

Tense

Barrier

By JOSEPH MacSWEENEY

LONDON (CP) — The banks of the Zambezi River form a sort of no-man's land in the tense standoff between white-ruled Rhodesia and black Zambia.

The Zambezi, which rises in Angola, provides two great spectacles in a 1,633-mile journey that takes it between Rhodesia and Zambia and thus through Mozambique to the Indian Ocean.

At Livingstone, the river plunges over a 1,800-yard-wide gorge, forming one of the great waterfalls of the world, Victoria Falls.

WRITHES, TWISTS

Then it writhes through weirdly-twisting gorges until, 70 miles downstream, it flows into Lake Kariba, the largest man-made lake in the world and site of the Kariba Dam, which provides hydroelectric power for both Rhodesia and Zambia.

This landmark is vital in the calculations of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, striving to maintain independence, of Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, worried about his power supply, and of British Prime Minister Wilson, who has offered token troops and RAF jet planes to Zambia.

Sitting in the hot low country of the Zambezi River, the $330,400,000 Kariba project is the main source of power for Zambia's copper mines and for Rhodesia's factories. The two territories jointly own and administer the dam, which turns out 1,200,000 kilowatts, the world's third-largest output.

DIRECT STAKE

As Wilson was careful to point out, Britain has a direct stake in Kariba. The British taxpayer financed much of the project and Britain needs the products of Zambia's copper belt, third largest producer in the world.

Because the power plant is on the Rhodesian side of the border, Zambia fears Smith may cut the supply — an idea rejected by the Rhodesian leader even before he made his unilateral declaration of independence Nov. 11.

It was not known how close British troops might move toward the Rhodesian line. Wilson said Britain is prepared to use military force against the Smith regime if it became necessary to protect electricity supplies to the copper industry.

Elderly Woman Rescues Child

VICTORIA, P.E.I. (UPI) — A 60-year-old Victoria, Prince Edward Island woman, Mrs. George Cannon, plunged into the chilly waters off a wharf near her home to rescue a five-year-old girl on Tuesday.

Mrs. Cannon, who lives near the wharf heard the screams of other children when little Julie Ann Boulter tumbled from the pier into the sea.

Both the rescuer and the youngster were reported well after their experience.

Locked House Hides Children

TOKYO (Reuters) — Three children were kept locked in a house in southern Japan for almost 10 years, police said here. The two girls, aged 14 and 10, and a boy 12, were fed only once every 10 days.

U.S. Covert to Carry Roving Strike Force

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. forces probably will use intensive "roving strikes" by helicopter-borne troops against a heavier inflow of North Vietnamese troops.

However, it is considered unlikely the United States will send troops into Laos to form a fence to cut off the movement of North Vietnamese regulars into South Viet Nam. Also, Cambodia's professed neutrality will be respected, even though U.S. officials believe North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops have used that country as a sanctuary.

This picture emerged from interviews with top U.S. sources familiar with the planning in the growing war in South Viet Nam. Within the present policy, sources said, the U.S. is basically fighting a strategic defensive war in its efforts to save South Viet Nam from complete Communist control.

The best way to do this, experts said, is to take the tactical offensive — "to find the Communists and cut them, to pieces."

This is a course of action U.S. ground combat forces have been following for months and which apparently will be amplified.

There is every indication the section of the infiltration network extending from North Viet Nam through Laos is in for a some heavy aerial pounding.

A recent announcement that East Germany is presenting 5,000 bicycles to the North Vietnamese is considered of great importance.

Such bicycles, it is estimated, could carry between 300 and 400 pounds of supplies each.

U.S. sources said the Communists used bicycles to supply

French troops — a defeat which led to French withdrawal from Indochina.

U.S. authorities here estimate the North Vietnamese have about 30 battalions in South Viet Nam.

Assuming they double their forces to 30,000 men, the sources said, it is estimated it would take about 90 tons of supplies to maintain a force of this size.

If the infiltration routes through Laos come under heavy

The Hospital Vote

TO BELIEVE that the provincial government and perhaps the federal government ought to pay a larger share of the cost of hospital construction, and the local ratepayers a smaller share than is now demanded of them, is entirely reasonable. In the Colonist's view the effort to achieve this end should be unremitting. But we cannot agree with making a hospital accommodation situation which is already bad enough in Greater Victoria through what can only be at this time a futile protest—a vote against the proposed regional property tax levy averaging two mills.

Few, probably, will deny that the local community should bear some portion of hospital costs by property taxation. That there is a direct connection between sufficiency or insufficiency of hospital service in a district and property values is hardly to be doubted. And if local representatives are to have some say in calling the tune of hospital construction, it is fair that there should be some equivalent financial responsibility.

But, on the other hand, there is ample cause to complain that the ratepayers are being called upon by the provincial government to bear an excessive and inequitable burden under the present formula. The portion of the sales tax originally designed to pay for hospital service is not being used entirely for that purpose. The province has a towering surplus of funds. The municipal property-owners find taxes rising year by year to distressing levels, toward the point, in fact, where home ownership must lose its attraction and investments must suffer. And property taxation is not closely related to ability to pay.

In these circumstances, it is not surprising that many citizens and some municipal leaders have taken the position that the province is asking too much when it requires that the district contribute more than 40 per cent of the cost of expanding the hospital facilities.

Nevertheless—and this is the important point—the advocates of a negative vote on the regional hospital plan are acting as if the Victoria area were the whole of British Columbia; as if by rejecting the plan the district could compel the government to change its mind and provide more accommodation out of its own revenue.

When almost all of the rest of the province is building hospitals on the formula these opponents would turn down, and when the government is in no imminent political danger, this is surely unrealistic.

Fight on for a better and fairer allocation of resources, we must. But gaining the hospital space we need comes first.

Same Pattern

WHEN Parliament meets in January the Pearson government will again be a minority administration but it is clear that it will be in no more danger of suffering defeat in the Commons than it was before last month's test at the polls.

Mr. George Chatterton, the able MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, has returned from a Conservative caucus at Ottawa to reaffirm for instance that his party has no intention to precipitate another election, but instead desires to attend to the primary purpose of carrying out the nation's business.

This reflects the mood of the electorate, which certainly has no wish for another early election, which in any case probably would resolve nothing in view of the mixed bag of party colors that dominate the political scene.

The situation facing the new Parliament in fact is similar in every respect to what it was before dissolution of its predecessor. Mr. Pearson needlessly sought a majority mandate when it was patent to everyone that his administration was in no danger. For all their dissent from government policies the opposition groups were careful never to combine against any measure which might have upset the Pearson regime. One by one, yes, but never all together.

Further reassurance that this will be the pattern to be followed in the new Commons comes from the Social Credit leader, Mr. Robert Thompson. He commands the smallest following, a total of only five seats, but added to the 132 seats the Liberal government can count on, this will enable the Pearson administration to carry on without serious worry. And Mr. Thompson has indicated that his Socialists will support the government in event of any likelihood of upset.

It is up to Mr. Pearson, therefore, to forget his majority mandate plea and be thankful he can gain the needed support to sustain his government while it gets to grips with the many problems that await attention. One could only wish however that his party had a more decisive and capable leader.

Back in Style

SPACE travel has so ceased to be a novelty one takes note of each fresh orbital journey, not quite with a yawn but certainly as just another of those things. We grow quickly to accept as the norm that which at the outset is a marvel beside which the ancient wonders of the world pale almost into nothing.

Something new, and intriguing withal, however, has been added by the two American astronauts now circling the heavens in the Gemini 7 vehicle, to wit: one of them has shed his space suit and has been lounging comfortably in long underwear.

The proposed launching of the Gemini 8 craft destined to link up with number 7 will, of course, if successful, be a major step forward in this form of modern exploration but for the moment this strip-tease, as it has been called, becomes a centre of attention.

For one thing it should put the aforesaid underwear garment back into the sartorial highlight. Long underwear has been rather out of fashion for some time as wearing apparel, except in secret, and when mentioned at all, facetiously referred to as being colored red.

Red as the caption for long-johns, to ring the semantic change, was chosen no doubt with the idea that so colored one was thus best kept warm. Astronaut Lovell has reversed the credo by discarding to the point of his underwear in order to keep cool.

Nor is this close-fitting garment simply to be regarded as fit subject of humorous vein; it means that astronauts to come need not look like men from Mars as they enter their capsules, but instead promises a great advance in the environment in which future space exploration can be carried out. Co-pilot Lovell has made history with his long underwear.

It would be nice to learn however if his long-johns are red; 'would be a pity in its way if they are not.

"Would you like this one at the new rate or would you like to pay the old rate and have one tow-away to credit?"

Ottawa Offbeat

Parliamentary Storm Clouds

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

ALTHOUGH it may not have been needed, Hon. Alvin Hamilton has provided the final proof recently that the next session of Parliament is not going to be a gentle one.

Speaking before the Confederation Club (a Conservative organization) here last week, he bluntly stated that unless the Liberal government "cleaned house," the Conservative Opposition would make trouble for the government.

This may sound like a hollow boast—but probably it is not.

With the government in a minority position in the Commons, it can be handed trouble on a silver platter if the official Opposition (the Conservatives) can come up with matters on which the minority parties feel bound to offer support.

Look back, then, to the recent election campaign.

In that effort, all of the Opposition parties belabored the Liberals for the "scandals" of the previous administration. All of them called for a clean-up.

Where can they stand, then, if the Conservatives demand that the Liberals do a house-cleaning as the first order of business in the new Parliament?

They can hardly go back on their election statements, because the people who supported them are going to be watching.

They will almost have to support the Conservatives if they rip into the Liberals with regard to the furniture-spy-Dorion-Selkirk affairs.

There are some who will rise in anger and declare that the Conservatives are indulging in muck-raking and such.

They may have something to say about it—but did the Conservatives create the muck?

Mr. Hamilton, of course, is not the most soft-spoken of Conservatives. He has often pointed to his farm background and subsequent acquaintance with matters of the barnyard.

And, in the last Parliament there was no other Conservative (with the exception of the party's leader) who could speak out as strongly as could the member for Qu'Appelle.

On that basis, his threats might not be so easily disregarded.

And there are some new members in the new Parliament. New this time, but experienced.

There is Hon. George Hees, for example, a diplomat if you like, but not a man known for pulling his punches.

There is Hon. David Fulton, for example, a man of erudition, but one who can cut a fine slice with words which do not appear to offend at first hearing.

And nobody has ever said that Hon. Richard Bell was known for his gentleness or tact when it came to dealing with the deficiencies of opposing political parties.

Ambitious Germans Applaud

Europe Without Frontiers

By NEAL ARCHERSON from Bonn

ALL WEST GERMANS, especially the young, are enthusiasts for "the European idea." This vision of a continent without frontiers, a single trading market, and eventually a single federation, is indeed the only political notion to stir the Germans deeply and effectively since the collapse of the Third Reich.

It is a refuge for idealism, but under one corner of that broad roof await some whose ideals are very unprogressive. On the right wing of politics there are those who skillfully use this internationalist vocabulary to justify policies which Hitler would not have disapproved.

I talked to a young businessman about the Silesian refugees, expelled from their homes when that part of Germany passed to Poland in 1945. "Only when all these frontiers of the past have melted away," he said, mournfully, "can every German again live where he would like."

I suggested that if the refugees were prepared to live as loyal Polish citizens under the rule of Mr. Gomulka, they might not have to wait till the millennium. "Live as Poles?" Absurd. What would become of the spiritual inheritance of their Western Christianity?

Extreme right wingers, incurable old Nazis and the militant displaced persons' leagues, take care to refer to the "European idea" when they lodge their claim to lost territory—or indeed to lands which were never German. The genuflection to "Europe" in fact, has become part of the propaganda equipment of contemporary Fascism, as the speeches of Sir Oswald Mosley, the "Jeune Europe" movement in France and Belgium, and even the ideas of intellectual "Goldwaterians" reveal.

A man who is certainly no Fascist, Franz-Josef Strauss, leader of the Bavarian Christian Democrats, resorts to this tactic to flatter the "expellee" interest without scandalizing foreigners. He speaks of a European federation under the rule of law stretching from the Atlantic to the Bug—but excluding the Soviet Union—in which Germans could again settle without restriction. He warns that German recognition of the Oder-Neisse post-war border with Poland would be "retape into outmoded nation-state thinking." A Pole would retort that to reject a changed frontier and claim the territory beyond it is precisely nation-state thinking, and at its most dangerous.

Coming back, of course, is Erik Nielsen, who does not yet feel satisfied with the outcome of his questions and statements on the misbehavior of certain individuals closely and otherwise related to the government.

Still in hand, too, will be Hon. Gordon Churchill, a gentleman who appears to feel best when he is tearing a strip off some Liberal; and Hon. Marcel Lambert, whose ponderous stubbornness has driven more than one Liberal minister to the extremes of patience—and beyond.

Add to these the experienced needlers of the back benches—Terry Nugent, Jack Horner, Donald Macdonald, for example, and Andrew Brewin, Harold Winch, Frank Howard and Arnold Peters of the NDP. And Real Casquette and Gilles Gregoire of the Creditistes.

Should all of these people decide that the government was to be harassed and should the government decide not to go further into matters of so-called government scandal, the next Parliament might well become little more than a shouting match before it ever has a chance to get down to business.

Mr. Hamilton, obviously, is determined that such should be the case.

His own party supporters will not argue with him. Those in the minority parties may.

But it does not look like a pleasant future for the government after next Jan. 18.

Many of them East European emigrants—working at the University of Los Angeles. Regret for the disintegration of the Hapsburg Empire leads all too easily towards the conclusion that "German hegemony" in Europe is the enemy of "petty, divisive nationalism."

Now that most of the "Versailles states" have become Communist, the anti-Communist current flows into the stream of pre-war nationalist resentment at Germany's reduced status. This brand of "Europeanism" is a call to revise Versailles and Potsdam together, for romantic South German Catholicism an anti-Communist crusade to revive a Holy Roman Empire, for Northern neo-Nazis a way of denouncing the legitimacy of every rival to German dominance over Central Europe.

The main current of "European" idealism is clean, if sometimes vague. The men I have described are a little alliance of cranks and extremists, but their crime is grave. They are poisoning a word. If "Europeanism" ever comes to mean a German claim to boss Central and Eastern Europe, they will have betrayed a whole generation in their own country.

To these must be added the "Danubians," Southern Germans and Austrians in alliance with German fugitives from the old Hapsburg regions. Take the case of Wenzel Jaksch, the Sudeten German who is now president of the West German Expellees' league. He is a Social Democrat, and a man who was ready to confront the Nazis rifle in hand, and yet his "European" vision is that of a greater Germany, once more including Austria, with Bohemia and Moravia "falling willingly into the German orbit." With Communism removed, he sees the Czechoslovak state disintegrating. Slovakia would become part of a "Danubian federation."

The "Danubians" are supported by a group of historians

Jesus said, He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto eternal life. — St. John, 12:25.

Eyes in a Window

I would like to protest the regulation against stuffed animal turn indicators in car rear windows. The reasons for this regulation, as stated in Saturday's Colonist, are simply not valid.

I have such an animal in my car and it "obstructs" an area of four by six inches in a window 11 inches high and 35 inches wide. By my calculation, the amount of "obstruction" is almost four per cent. Obviously the claim that these devices obscure a driver's vision is ridiculous, since a person sitting in the back seat blocks out a much larger window area. Surely we will not make rear seat passengers illegal.

The charge that these indicators are "distracting" to following motorists is similarly unfounded. These blinking lights are certainly no more distracting than the so-called "sequential" tail lights of 1965 and '66 Thunderbirds or the flashing red lights used by our constabulary during emergencies.

I would like to close by posing question: These animal indicators have been in use for several years. Has it been proved on a pro rata basis, that cars equipped with these devices are involved in more accidents? I should be very surprised if such evidence is available.

Lanes of Equity

We are informed that rebellion against authority is becoming more prevalent, not only in our jails but in every walk of life, even in the homes. Perhaps there are reasons.

Our provincial government, which is not entirely without blame in its extravagance, and its search for new sources of taxation, in these modern days of government by bribery, appears now to acquiesce in a new "land tax," for hospital purposes, for which the hospital board will naturally be blamed, not the government.

We must guard against land taxation, or the Roman laws of equity, which were first collected at the point of the sword, by an equus, or knight, sitting on an equus, or horse, the sword being the authority. The rebels are now evidently put into jail, as they claim the right to acquire for their own use what the knight took by force.

As the equity of honest industry is no longer secure, we older people can understand why the younger generation, in America, rebel against the laws of equity, and favor the laws of equality, which are much older than those of equity.

'Unfair Action'

I have followed with a great deal of interest the career of Mayor Wilson and consider that up to the present he has done a good job.

But it must be remembered he has been most fortunate that during his tenure of office a great deal of money, re the Thomas McPherson estate, has been poured into the coffers of the city. Whether this has been, and is being wisely spent, is not for me to say.

However, his latest action in publicly supporting Mr. Toomey to take over as mayor is incomprehensible, much out of order and most unfair to the other candidates.

For a good many years I was actively interested in municipal politics. I always found the people (the voters) to be fair-minded and feel that in this instance they will not stand for the dictatorial action of Mayor Wilson.

Never in my long term, and I served under several mayors, have I experienced anything so totally unfair as this.

Hospital Vote

Many local voters seem confused about the vote for the hospital, when no confusion need exist. The facts are these:

1. There are 1,600 people waiting this moment to be admitted to Greater Victoria public hospitals.

2. Five thousand or more extra people are coming into our capital region every year.

3. A maximum two-mill levy will build all the hospital facilities we need, for at least 15 years.

4. The tax proposed will be shared by all, be they homeowners, renters or businesses.

5. There is no alternative but the old, unfair method of voluntary contributions; therefore, vote "yes" for hospitals on Dec. 11.

CHRIS H. MOORE, MD, President, Victoria Medical Society.

Grateful

The members of the women's auxiliary to the CNIB wish to express their grateful thanks to the public of Victoria for the splendid support given to the recent sale of blind handicraft on Nov. 26. At this annual sale, only articles made by the blind are offered for sale, thus helping our sightless friends to become self-supporting. We are indeed grateful to the many who supported the sale in spite of a rough and tempestuous day.

Swimming Pools

For the past two years our association has thoroughly investigated and compiled information concerning recreational facilities in various areas of B.C. and has pressed Saanich council to implement a definite program to acquire land for parks and to develop recreational facilities. We are naturally very pleased that a start has been made by the inclusion of land acquisition in Bylaw No. 2426 and swimming pools in Bylaw No. 2442 to be voted on Dec. 11.

We have heard and read of criticisms of the swimming pool bylaw and would like to reply to these criticisms.

Why do we need swimming pools when we have the Crystal, Elk Lake, Beaver Lake and the Gorge?

Firstly, the Crystal is in Victoria centre and is inadequate for the city alone, according to the parks department. Secondly, Saanich is the second largest municipality in B.C. and as yet has no enclosed recreational facilities, whereas many smaller areas have swimming pools, ice arenas, etc. A start must be made now to initiate a development of this type. As far as the lakes and Gorge are concerned, they are only useable for two or three months each year, are muddy due to overcrowding and are difficult to reach. . . . Lastly, our salt waterways are so cold that no further word is necessary.

Why are they proposed in the Gordon Head and Burnside-Tillamook areas only?

Saanich covers such an extremely large area that it is not practical to centralize recreational facilities. Placing the pools in these two areas as a start will give basic coverage to each half of the municipality.

Funds, it is said, will have to be allocated each year to cover maintenance and operation of the pools. All the reports, without exception, from the various centres all over B.C. indicated that with a small admission charge, the maintenance, management, lifeguards and general operation expenses were fully covered. Pools, however, are not a money-maker.

"We can't afford any extra tax burden." The pools will not cost the taxpayer about one-fifth mill per year. This would mean, on a basic tax of $250, the one-fifth mill would add approximately $1 per year to taxes. It costs more than $1 to make three return trips to the Crystal from most areas in Saanich.

Piano Needed

The recent regular meeting of the board of management of Rose Manor took place in a strange surroundings. Through clever renovation a portion of the basement has been remodelled for the use of the women of the board, who voluntarily give a great deal of service for the welfare of the residents of the home. Last Wednesday this new board room was used for the first time.

Among the items of business, the piano in the dining-room came up for lengthy discussion. This doughty instrument, over 30 years old, has been the mainstay of hundreds of concerts. It has indeed served its time and is ready to expire; piano tuners say that it is no longer economic even to attempt to tune or repair it.

The home, now operating at full capacity with 112 residents, has always been fortunate in being able to draw on the talents of many gifted local artists. It is necessary to provide our senior citizens, most of whom can no longer go out at night to attend concerts, with some musical entertainment. It is true that the artists perform for love only, but they do deserve a decent instrument. Perhaps some public-spirited citizen would like to donate a good upright piano in sound condition, knowing that the gift would be both well cared for and well used.

Anyone who would like to make such a gift could kindly telephone to the matron of Rose Manor.

Irradiated Foods Dangerous?

By JOHN DAVY
From London

A discovery of first importance for understanding the harmful effects of atomic radiation has been made by scientists at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

The discovery, reported in the magazine Nature, shows that there may be unsuspected hazards in using such radiation to sterilize foodstuffs. The scientists, Dr. R. D. Holsten, Dr. M. Sugrall and Professor F. C. Steward, have found that when sugar is exposed to radiation, chemical substances are produced which interfere with the growth and development of living cells, and may promote genetic mutations

What these substances are is still unknown — but a great many foodstuffs contain sugar. This opens up a whole new line of research into the effects of radiation. Until now, such work has concentrated on the direct effects of radiation on the cell, particularly the damage to the chromosomes which carry the genetic information. The discovery of the effects on sugar shows that there may be a whole realm of indirect effects.

Effect Widespread

Viet Nam War Spreads Poison

By ARCH MACKENZIE, from Washington

The latest Soviet acts appear to confirm the paralysis which the war in Viet Nam has caused in East-West relations.

The impact of the growing war also has cast a shadow over Western relations.

Russia has announced a five-per-cent increase in defence spending and taken a harder line toward the U.S. on the specific questions of Viet Nam and West Germany.

These are being interpreted as Soviet realization that it can do nothing to end the war now, without drawing more criticism from China.

The evidence from the battlefield elsewhere shows North Vietnamese determination to fight on for a long time and that it intends to match in its own way the steady increase of American military might in South Viet Nam, drawing from its own manpower resources and using Soviet and Chinese aid.

Thus, the long war which has been taking shape all year has become a fact, diplomats say gloomily, with no hope anywhere that anybody can do anything about it.

Militarily, it means that U.S. forces will continue to swell. The present level of around 170,000 will grow perhaps as high as 350,000 or even 400,000 men, reliable quarters predict.

Pressure will increase on President Johnson as the 1966 congressional elections next November draw closer for more bombing in the north and perhaps even in Laos and Cambodia to cut North Vietnamese supplies of troops and men and thereby save the lives of American troops.

There is growing apprehension as well that the American role in another major Asian land war—perhaps bigger than Korea—

revives substantially the hazard of another direct Chinese intervention.

The question is how much its leaders will take, or whether they will remain content to urge on North Viet Nam and show extreme caution themselves.

At least as important, say observers, is the impasse to which the war in Viet Nam has led prospects of better relations with the Communist world.

The key is an agreement to curb or ban nuclear spread which Russia's latest mood now makes more dubious than ever. But time is limited, say observers, and the next logical U.S. Soviet steps in the absence of any nuclear agreement are costly programs to find the nuclear means to ward off nuclear attack by missiles.

Once such programs are begun or completed, another major step in nuclear escalation has been taken and nuclear disarmament is that much more difficult, it is argued.

The poison of Viet Nam has seeped elsewhere too — into hopes of relaxing trade with the European Communist bloc, into relations with other Eastern countries and even into the Atlantic Alliance where it has created friction among Washington, Paris and London.

It affects the nuclear role to be given to West Germany within NATO. As the Soviet line hardens, West German arguments could gain strength toward obtaining a larger share in the making of decisions despite considerable reluctance among the Western allies.

Moral Victory

Mitterrand Vote Comforts Reds

By ALAIN de LYROT, from Paris

French leftists, especially the Communist Party, were the principal victors in the French elections which humiliated President Charles de Gaulle.

Leftist candidate Francois Mitterrand, who received the massive support of the French Reds, came in second to De Gaulle with 32 per cent of the vote—far ahead of centre candidate Jean Lecanuet.

De Gaulle received 43.9 per cent of the vote. For the first time since the 1936 "Popular Front" (the union of all leftist parties including the Communists), the French left managed to keep its unity and to prove its massive power in France's political life.

It can be safely assumed that about one-fifth of Mitterrand's 32 per cent vote came directly from the powerful French Communist Party. Until now the Communists had managed to retain about that percentage of the vote but had been isolated and kept at arm's length by other leftist parties such as the Socialist Party.

Mitterrand officially accepted the Reds' support. Although not a Communist himself, it makes him partly the political prisoner of that party.

France's anti-Communists, therefore, will have little choice in the Dec. 19 runoff. They will have to vote for De Gaulle to avoid a Communist victory even though some of them strongly disapprove of his negative policies toward the Atlantic Alliance and the European Common Market.

This should insure De Gaulle's re-election although it is expected that many anti-Communists might vote for Mitterrand on the assumption that he will not be elected anyway.

The result may be that De Gaulle's majority in the runoff will be relatively small and the Mitterrand vote stronger than expected.

The setback suffered by De Gaulle was believed to have three major causes:

● His arrogant disdain for the French electorate which led him to assume that he could be re-elected without taking an active and serious part in the campaign except for two short radio and television appearances.

● A normal drop of popularity after seven years of absolute power during which his backing declined from 80 per cent in the 1958 referendum to 61 per cent in the 1962 referendum.

● More than 20 per cent of the French voters are less than 35 years old and many of them are believed to have voted for the younger men who ran against De Gaulle.

● The anger and worry of a substantial number of voters who saw De Gaulle as a threat to the Atlantic Alliance, Franco-American co-operation and European unity.

● De Gaulle's age. At 75, it was felt that De Gaulle should not have aspired to another seven-year term.

● The talent, eloquence and good looks of his two leading contenders who staged a lively and intelligent campaign.

The conclusion of the first ballot of the French presidential elections is that even if De Gaulle is elected in the runoff Dec. 19, he will be forced to drop his intransigence and take the opposition into consideration. A more human and flexible president may, or at any rate should, emerge.

Law Declared Unconstitutional

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A three-judge federal court declared unconstitutional Wednesday a New York state law requiring that a voter must have at least a sixth-grade education in an English-language school. The decision affected approximately 500,000 Spanish-educated Puerto Ricans.

Judge Irving R. Kaufman of U.S. District Court, who wrote the unanimous decision, said the New York law was superseded by the 1963 federal voting rights act.

Judge Reserves Verdict

Judge Montague Tyrwhitt-Drake has reserved judgment until Dec. 20 in the Victoria County Court trial of former HMCS Naden photographic head, Eric Haywood and civilian Charles Whyte.

The judge announced the ad-judgment after counsel in the case wound up their arguments Wednesday.

Evidence in the "speedy" trial of the two men (a jury) lasted 20 days. The case began Nov. 3.

Royal Letter Missed

Chant Forgot City Police Hunt Thieves

City police were not called in to investigate the theft Tuesday of a letter from the late King George VI to former premier Duff Pattullo, at the Legislative Buildings. Apparently it never occurred to anyone to tell them.

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant said Wednesday he did not know whether the letter, removed from its glass-protected frame in a corridor near the provincial library, could be identified.

He doubted that fingerprints of the culprit could be found because the frame had been handled by other people after it was found discarded in the nearby MLAs' washroom.

NO COPIES

The letter cannot be replaced because there were no copies. Mr. Chant said he thinks it is in the hands of a collector because it was apparently carefully removed from the frame.

If thefts become too frequent from the Legislative Buildings, some of the more valuable displays may have to be removed from the corridors or placed in more inaccessible places, he said.

Discovery Lacks Purpose

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (Reuters)—Two American scientists who hacked their way through a "mathematical jungle" to win the Nobel physics prize said Wednesday they could see no practical application for their work.

Prof. Julian S. Schwinger, 47, of Harvard University, told reporters he was awarded the prize because "I tried to hack my way through the mathematical jungle and arrive at a definite numerical value for the magnetic moment of the electron."

His colleague, Prof. Richard P. Feynman, also 47, said: "I can see no practical applications from the discoveries."

Tubs to Bloom

Where else in Canada do you find a plashing fountain and colorful tubs of heather blooming in December? Sandra Turner, 5021 Santa Clara, admires one of all-season planters in Centennial Square which will burgeon with tulips and daffodils come spring, later will hold summer flowers.—(Bud Kinsman)

Painting Sold For $60,000

LONDON (Reuters)—A small painting by the 17th century painter Claude, which brought £50 ($150) in a sale in 1942, was sold Wednesday for £20,000 ($60,000) at Sotheby's, the London auctioneers.

Minister Points Finger

SELMA (UPI)—An attorney for three white men charged with the murder of civil rights worker Rev. James Reeb of Boston attempted to prove Wednesday that the minister may have died because his friends did not give him first aid.

Reeb and two fellow Unitarian ministers were attacked last March 9 as they left a Negro restaurant where they had dinner. The three white ministers, all from out of state, were in Selma to help with a civil rights drive.

Those charged with the attack are Vernon O'Neal Hoggie, a 30-year-old mechanic, his brother William Stanley Hoggie, a 36-year-old salesman, and Elmer Cook, 41, a novelty firm manager.

DEATH BLOW

The state introduced depositions from Birmingham physicians who stated that a massive head injury suffered by Reeb in the attack was the basic cause of his death.

Rev. Orloff Miller of Boston, one of Reeb's companions on the night of the attack, took the stand in the courtroom of circuit judge L. S. Moore Wednesday and identified Cook as the "lead man" in the club-swinging assault.

Although identifying Cook as the "lead man," in the attack, Miller, like Olson, was unable to say for certain that the other defendants were among the "four or five" whites who assaulted the three.

Pitcher asked Miller if it was not true that he had dropped to the sidewalk as the attack began. Miller said that was so and agreed to demonstrate for the jury.

Leaving the witness stand,

Miller stood in front of the jury box and dropped to his knees. Pitcher asked Miller: "What can you see from that position?"

"I can see the ground," he replied. The minister then added: "I had a good look at the gentleman I have identified."

VOTE December 11

... at Official Polling Stations—8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Dear Victoria Voters:

It has been my good fortune to serve as Alderman in one of the most exciting periods of the City's history. Under the leadership of Mayor R. B. Wilson we have made advances, during this time, which would have seemed almost unbelievable a few short years ago. For most of this time it has been my privilege to be closely associated with many of these developments. As Chairman of the Committees dealing with City Beautification, Downtown Improvement and Urban Renewal, I have dedicated many hundreds of hours to the resolve to make our City the finest capital in Canada. Above all, I have derived the keenest pleasure from my Chairmanship of the Centennial Square Committee which has resulted in a civic complex acclaimed across Canada. I believe that planning, both regional and local, is the key to our ability to assure for our Capital City and its residents an ever more prosperous future. We here are endowed with the most beautiful natural environment that has ever been bestowed upon a city. Such a heritage demands from those in positions of responsibility the utmost of their wisdom and forethought as to how such riches are administered.

Now after much thought, and consultation with those whose opinions I respect, I am standing for election as Mayor of Victoria. It is my belief that the Office of Mayor is a full-time responsibility, demanding from the holder of this office his complete and undivided allegiance. It is my intention, if elected, to resign from my present position and to work full time as your Mayor.

I am grateful of the opportunity that you have given me for the last five years to serve you as one of your Aldermen. The trust you have placed in me has, I believe, been justified and now I earnestly ask for your support again so that I may continue to serve you, this time as Mayor.

Yours sincerely,

Answers Up in Air

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council ended Wednesday with several key questions, particularly on birth control and mixed marriages, left unanswered.

Two expected papal statements, ending mandatory meatless Fridays and announcing new cardinals, did not come. It may well be months before the birth-control and mixed-marriage questions are answered, if ever.

But Vatican sources said it is probably only a matter of time before Pope Paul will announce a consistory for the creation of new cardinals. He already had said publicly he will name new princes of the church after the council had ended.

An announcement lifting the centuries-old rule of Friday abstinence also is reported imminent.

Pope Paul sounded out the bishops on fasting and abstinence during a council recess last month. His survey was said to be preliminary to an announcement.

Frequently during the last council session, which started in September and ended Wednesday, the Pope was reported on the verge of issuing a document relaxing certain pledges a non-Catholic is expected to make when marrying a Catholic.

Sources said the issuance of the mixed-marriage document was postponed because of differing suggestions by bishops.

The question of birth control is under study by a special papal commission. The council upheld past church teaching against contraception, but left the way open to possible modification.

PGE Dispute

Union Awaits Reply

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen was still waiting Wednesday night for officials of the Pacific Great Eastern railway to reply to its request for union-management talks to end the PGE dispute.

A union spokesman said the railway has not replied to a brotherhood telegram to PGE general manager J. S. Broadbent, calling for such a meeting.

The telegram was sent early Wednesday.

A railway spokesman said the union's request was being considered and a decision was likely to be made today.

One hundred and 12 trainmen booked off sick last Friday in a dispute involving the dismissal of a trainman at Prince George four days before his six-month probationary period was to end.

They ignored a PGE threat to suspend them if they did not return to work Monday.

Only passenger service was disrupted Wednesday by the dispute.

'No Connection' Between Resignations

There is no connection between the nearly simultaneous resignations of two members of the B.C. Securities Commission, Attorney-General Robert Bonner said Wednesday.

The attorney-general said he didn't think William Irwin of Victoria, securities commission chairman and superintendent of brokers, was going to resign, although he had been offered a position with a Vancouver firm.

Barry Speton, deputy superintendent of brokers, has announced his resignation at the end of the year to enter private law practice in Vancouver.

LEAVES DEC. 1

Cecil Bayfield, an inspector who works out of Victoria, is nearing retirement age and will leave the branch Dec. 1 to enter another field of work.

Rumors of mass resignations from the commission apparently were sparked by the resignation of these two men. Mr. Irwin said Wednesday in Vancouver that he was considering accepting a brokerage firm post, which he described as "a lucrative and substantial offer."

NOT UNHAPPY

However, he was also in touch with senior officials of the attorney-general's department, and it was afterward that Attorney-General Bonner said he doubted Mr. Irwin would accept the other job. Mr. Irwin emphasized that he was not unhappy with his present position.

"I have never worked for a finer person than Attorney-General Bonner," he said.

Shatters 'Flat-Foot' Theory

Dancing London Bobby Waltzes After Work

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — A high-helmeted bobby, who patrols one of the world's best known street addresses, has given the boot to the cliché that all policemen are flat-footed.

Raymond Rouse, Police Constable No. 124, whose beat is the sidewalk outside 10 Downing Street, has just won his 28th trophy for ballroom dancing.

Ten Downing Street is, of course, the official London residence of British prime ministers.

With the wife of Prime Minister Wilson watching on television, Constable Rouse danced to one of his greatest triumphs Monday night.

From 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Rouse, 25, patrolled outside No. 10. At 5 p.m., he strolled 500 yards to Cannon Row police station, beside Scotland Yard, signed off duty and went home to suburban Dulwich.

Off came the police uniform and on went a pleated shirt, a cummerbund and a tuxedo. Minutes later, he was on his way to the Orchid Ballroom at Purley, where he partnered 19-year-old Iris Bane in a Latin American dance before several million BBC-TV viewers.

With Iris, he won the maximum points a couple could win. Next, he partnered 19-year-old Jill Day in a formation dance.

Once more the policeman and his partner won the ultimate in points.

Watching the performance were many of Rouse's police friends.

Also looking in, at 10 Downing Street, was Mrs. Wilson.

"Earlier in the day one of the boys outside No. 10 had told Mrs. Wilson that Constable Rouse would be dancing that evening on TV," a police spokesman said. "She promised to look in on his big night."

Gemini 7 Just Gets Roomier and Roomier, Pilots Find

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The Gemini 7 pilots—yearning for a cup of coffee—flew on Wednesday toward their goal of 14 days in space. On the earth below, their Gemini 6 sister ship was undergoing a crucial pre-launch test.

U.S. Air Force Lt.-Col. Frank Borman and Navy Cmdr. James A. Lovell Jr. told during their fifth day in space how roomy their tiny spacecraft seemed.

OTTAWA — Lionel Parlson of Ottawa has been appointed executive director of a new secretariat for the 24-member Canadian Inter-Faith Conference. The conference was set up to initiate religious projects for 1967 centennial observances, and to co-ordinate or encourage others.

"For your information, the Gemini 6 sim (dress rehearsal) flight is on," said Mission Control in Houston.

There was a slim chance the Gemini 6 spacecraft would blast off from Cape Kennedy, Fla., in pursuit of Gemini 7 as early as Sunday—but a Monday launch was more likely.

Navy Capt. Walter M. Schirra Jr. and Air Force Major Thomas P. Stafford—the Gemini 6 pilots—stepped into their spacecraft atop its Titan II rocket at about noon to begin their major rehearsal to test the spacecraft's systems.

At about 2:23 p.m., the Gemini 7 flying over Cape Kennedy tried to talk down to the Gemini 6 pilots in their waiting spacecraft. The Gemini 7 voice couldn't be heard in Gemini 6 and the Gemini 6 voice came over weakly to Gemini 7.

The night before, technicians worked feverishly on launch pad 19 at Cape Kennedy to replace a faulty computer in the spacecraft.

That computer and the spacecraft's radar will aid the pursuit pilots to chase down the Gemini 7 and fly in formation with it.

Meanwhile, Gemini 7 rolled through the fifth day of its intended record endurance test.

"How are you making out after four days in space?"

asked flight director Chris Kraft.

"We're feeling pretty good, Chris," said command pilot Borman. "It's amazing how the spacecraft seems to be getting bigger and bigger. Either we're losing weight or we're getting used to it."

WELLINGTON—The Labor party ousted its parliamentary leader, Arnold Nordmeyer, 64, in the biggest political surprise in New Zealand in years. Replacing him is Norman Kirk, 42.

The pilot cabin in the equipment-loaded, 19-foot-long spacecraft is about the size of a front seat in a small foreign car.

"We're all in good shape,"

Borman told Kraft. "Waiting to see how (Gemini) 6 comes out." "I'm having withdrawal symptoms on coffee," Lovell said lightly.

NOW! FOR '66 FROM CHEVROLET ACTIVATED!

16 smooth 'n' responsive power teams—take your pick!

Impala Sport Coupe

'66 IMPALA

Chevrolet-shopping is always fun. Especially when your choice of engines ranges from the 155-hp Six and 195-hp V8 right on up to 4 optional V8's that pack as much power as you want: 275-hp, 325-hp, 390-hp and 425-hp!

What's next? Your choice of transmissions. If you like to shift for yourself, an all-new 3-Speed fully synchronized transmission is standard this year. There's also a 4-Speed floor-shift available.

You can also get a silk-smooth Powerglide automatic or Turbo Hydra-Matic. Your Chevrolet dealer can tell you all about matching engines and transmissions. Any one of the 16 combinations will be great fun.

Now drive a '66 Chevrolet. That's real fun. Because things like shock absorbers, body mounts and coil-springs have been recalibrated. Refined. Improved. You'll enjoy an even Jet-smoother ride.

But the fun's far from over. Take a look at that long list of personal choice equipment—like Four Season air conditioning, Comfortilt steering wheel, and AM/FM radio—and take your pick!

And ask about all those standard Chevrolet Safety Features such as seat belts, front and rear, and backup lights. It's easy to start the "fun" rolling. Just ask your Chevrolet dealer for a ride in one of those activated '66 Chevrolets.

Fund Near Half-Way Mark

Younger members of the Victoria YMCA are near the half-way mark in raising $2,000 for the Y's world service. The many clubs and groups of the Y make an annual sacrifice this year doing without chocolate bars to provide the money necessary to build and operate Ys and Y affiliates in underdeveloped nations. Money collected in Victoria will be used to help build a vocational training centre for Jordanian refugees. For this purpose the Y does not solicit money from the public, use money from its current capital fund or use Community Chest funds.

Trade Unions Toone's Stimulus

By GORDON DODD

Looking back, Ald. Alf Toone can be grateful to the trade union movement for what it has done for him.

He has probably repaid any debt he owed it handsomely in his own kind, but it remains that this long association has provided him with the means and the stimulus to develop what is today a many-sided interest in community affairs.

For the last nine years of that association, as secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council, he has been at the helm of the area's chief labor organization, while representing the community at large for five of those years as an alderman on Victoria city council.

EARLY ROOTS

Previously, as a shipyard worker, he was first a delegate, later president of the local Metal Trades Council.

From those roots, as labor decided it needed to be represented on other groups in the community, began the nourishment of the man who will be vying Saturday with two opponents for the mayoralty of Victoria.

"It has been stated wrongly that I am sponsored by the Victoria-Labor Council," said the 48-year-old alderman in an interview.

"The fact is that I have the endorsement of my employer to carry out my campaign, and nothing else."

STANDS AS CITIZEN

"I am standing for office as a citizen of Victoria and an alderman of five years' standing, regardless of my job," Ald. Toone added. "I would have worked in a packing plant or anywhere else, and in similar circumstances would be standing for office of mayor."

Early in the campaign, however, by virtue of his position, Ald. Toone was challenged to state his personal stand on the threatened general strike in B.C. Had he thought this relevant to his bid for the mayoralty?

"No," he answered, "but I felt that I should make my position clear as executive officer of the Victoria Labor Council."

Ald. Toone recalled, he had been criticized for taking his time in making his statement (in opposition to the strike), but his attitude had been that the provincial government had entered the talks and should be left to get on with negotiations.

"I have tried to be perfectly honest in all my statements," says Ald. Toone.

He is a firm supporter of the forward-looking capital budget program brought in by council under the leadership of retiring Mayor Wilson, after the city had gone through a long period of austerity and pay-as-you-go policies.

He is also a staunch advocate of regional planning.

He sees no reason why the city should not go ahead with certain programs in the confines of the city itself, but at the same time take advantage of schemes where all municipalities in the area would be sharing the cost.

He envisaged projects being pushed through consistent with the city's financial position over the years.

But how to meet what would be staggering costs of such a program?

But what of Ald. Toone and civic affairs?

Ferry Crews Angry
Over Shifts
For Hourly Sailings

While most people welcomed the news that B.C.'s ferries will make hourly weekend sailings during the winter, some crew members have been reported to be angry about their new shifts.

"The new schedule means we will be working practically all weekends and holidays, which is going back to the dark ages as far as working conditions are concerned," one disgruntled ferry employee said Wednesday.

Monty Aldous, general manager of B.C. Ferries, answered that "Naturally people are going to have to work weekends—we operate on weekends."

He said he had received no official complaint from ferry employees about the new winter schedule, which will double the number of weekend sailings between Vancouver Island and the B.C. mainland starting Jan. 1.

Mr. Aldous said the shift schedule had to be changed to provide the increased service, that one more year-round crew had been added and that employees were not being asked to work more days in a year than they were required to earlier.

He has also been chairman of a joint industrial development research committee since its inception, which explains why a call for more secondary industries in Victoria is part of his platform in the mayoralty race.

Born in England, Ald. Toone came to Canada as a child, living first in Edmonton. He once taught farming techniques to Indians.

He is married with two grown children, a son who is a member of Victoria police, a daughter still in high school.

Inquiry Set Into Death

A coroner's inquiry will be held today into the death of 63-year-old Albert Gramman of Cumberland, who died in Royal Jubilee Hospital Monday.

Mr. Gramman was a patient in an ambulance which was involved in a head-on collision south of Duncan Friday night.

Coroner Edmund Jorre de St. Jorre said the pathologist's report indicated that Mr. Gramman died of a heart attack and not from any injuries received in the crash.

COMMITTEE FIRST

Referring to the city's overall plan, which looks ahead to as far as 1981, Ald. Toone indicated one of the first things he would do if he became mayor would be to set up a steering committee to deal with the question of priorities.

He envisaged projects being pushed through consistent with the city's financial position over the years.

But how to meet what would be staggering costs of such a program?

Tugs Ride Storm To Save Oil Rig

MANILA, (AP) — Two tugs battled a storm in the South China Sea Wednesday in a continuing effort to save two sections of a giant oil drilling platform that broke up and capsized last week with the loss of 13 men.

The only survivor of the capsizing was Ernest James McKee, 25, of Calgary, an engineer with the Southeast Drilling Co. of Brunei. Also aboard the rig was Terry Ursulak, 25, of Edmonton.

A spokesman for the Shell Co., said the storm was blowing the tugs away from the Philippines. The tug Willem Barrenz had one section of the drilling platform under tow while the Tai Koo out of Hong Kong was watching the second section, but unable to get a line aboard.

TWO SECTIONS

The giant platform capsized last Wednesday while being towed by the Willem Barrenz. The superstructures and living quarters sank, leaving the two pontoon sections.

The two rescue tugs had been expected to reach Poro Point, 156 miles south of Manila on the west coast of Luzon Tuesday. But because of the storm, the Shell spokesman said, the vessels now have been ordered to head for Manila where there are superior facilities for salvage operations.

The Willem Barrenz radioed that it expected to reach here in four days.

The source discounted reports from Brunei that some bodies of the 13 seamen have been washed ashore in the Philippines, pointing out that the storm was blowing away from the country.

If successfully towed ashore, the two pontoons will be examined by engineers to determine cause of the accident.

Lunar Dust Tricky

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. space officials think Moon dust may have been the cause of Russia's latest failure to make a soft landing on the lunar surface.

The Luna 8, carrying scientific instruments, crashed and died on the moon late Monday after what had seemed to be a perfect flight from a Soviet launching pad. It was the fourth Russian failure to land working instruments on the Moon this year.

The United States will begin trying to do the same thing next May or June. It will launch several surveyor spacecraft in an effort to find out if the Moon's surface is firm enough to support a landing by Apollo astronauts before 1970.

RADAR GAUGE

The trick to a soft landing is the correct firing of braking rockets to slow down the spacecraft. The right time to fire is determined by radar altimeters. U.S. experts believe the Russians have the latest thing in radar height gauges and feel sure Luna 8 was equipped with them.

Then why did it crash? The theory of many scientists is that the Moon's surface is covered by dust or porous rock that could be inches to yards in depth.

HARD ROCK

Some experts said Wednesday the Russian craft's "radar eyes" may have penetrated the dust clear through to the hard rock. The difference in heights could have triggered the braking rockets seconds too late. As a result, Luna 8 could be buried in dust.

If dust is the Russian problem, it could be blamed for only three of the four failures. One attempt missed the Moon altogether.

"The Russian experience points up the extreme difficulty of throwing spacecraft to the Moon and then braking them to a safe landing," one U.S. official said. "U.S. engineers can only sympathize with the Russians."

CLIFF HANGER

The first U.S. surveyor is designed to slow down its descent toward the Moon from 8,600 feet per second at 1,000 miles to 5 feet per second at 13 feet above the surface. On the Moon, that 13-foot drop is equivalent to jumping off a table on Earth.

But it could be somewhat different if the U.S. radar has been fooled by Moon dust.

"The first surveyor launch may turn out to be a real cliff-hanger," U.S. officials said.

Drug Centre Offers First Aid

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Narcotics Addiction Foundation of British Columbia will open a counselling office for drug addicts on Friday in the heart of Vancouver's drug district.

Bert Hoskins, foundation executive, said there will be no treatment provided, only counselling.

"We are hoping to get in touch with addicts who need immediate help," he said.

Mr. Hoskins said there are between 1,200 and 1,700 known addicts in Vancouver at any given time.

The new office, at Main and Hastings, is only one block from the city's main drug-passing intersection of Hastings and Columbia, known among addicts as "The Corner."

Peter Veregin led the Doukhobors to British Columbia from the prairies in 1908 and they settled on 4,500 acres near the present site of Brilliant. They developed fine farms, a jam factory and sawmills.

Centennial Square Beauty Job Complete—Bastion Next

Operation Bootstrap Strides Ahead

By A. H. MURPHY
The city wrote "finis" to the Centennial Square story Wednesday with a final report on the $3,000,000 beautification project which has "pulled a depressed commercial area up by its bootstraps."

Begun in 1962 and completed, with the exception of some landscaping, in October of this year, the massive seven-project program has encouraged investment of private capital in the immediate area, says the report, issued over the signature of Ald. A. W. Toome, chairman of the Centennial Square committee.

Results of the influx are already being directly reflected in increased land values, which have risen from 75 per cent to 250 per cent, according to the statement.

And yet this was only part of the city's downtown beautification and capital improvement program.

Well into the first action stage is Bastion Square, for which tenders have been called. Rehabilitation of this area will mean salvaging another depressed but historic area along the waterfront adjacent to the Inner Harbor.

A series of connecting pedestrian malls along Broad Street and View Street are planned along with one more downtown carpark.

And, finally, the city's five-year paint-up plan, with tree-planting along major downtown arteries, is being put into motion.

In response to a proposal, the Centennial Square project was put on paper by the former head of the city's special projects division, R. D. Clark.

The intensive work schedule which followed included feasibility studies, cost estimates and visual model construction. Land acquisition was investigated and street realignment studied.

Navy Invites Families For Christmas Afloat

Christmas Day duty watch aboard navy ships will get a new bonus this year.

Safety Week Anything But

National road safety week has backfired. The accident total is up instead of down.

Two people in the Greater Victoria area were killed during the week which ended at midnight Tuesday. In addition, there were 96 accidents.

There's no easy solution to the problem, according to city traffic Inspector Ray Maitland.

COMPULSORY TESTS
"There are more pedestrians, more cars and the same roads," he said, "but why the figures are jumping up like they are I can't say."

Inspector Maitland supports compulsory testing of cars.

"This would eliminate the junkers from the roads," he said.

PEDESTRIANS, TOO
Pedestrians could be more careful. Seven pedestrians were injured on the roads in the city in the past week. One was killed.

"They could wear light-colored clothing, carry a flashlight, take more care in crossing the streets," Inspector Maitland said.

Drivers who follow too close on wet roads are inviting trouble. More care should be used in the peak traffic time when people are driving home around dusk.

But Inspector Maitland leans toward educating drivers in a bid to cut the accident toll.

"Maybe we have to revise our thinking," he said.

But the department hasn't the staff to run a large-scale educational program.

COINCIDENCE
He agreed that wet weather could be partly blamed for the increase, but added: "The figures are up all over the country—it's a coincidence if the weather was bad everywhere."

The city had 53 accidents and one fatality during the week. Last year it had 35 accidents and no fatalities.

Saanich had 37 accidents which produced 19 injuries. Last year there were 11 injuries but property damage increased by about $7,000.

FIGURES UP
Oak Bay had six accidents and two injuries, against last year's one accident and no injuries.

Esquimalt's figures weren't available, but there was believed to be a small increase in accidents.

Yuletide Party

Roxanna Harwood has a problem. An expensive and new problem—an Italian motor scooter.

Roxanna won the scooter in a national contest, and here's the problem: she's only 14.

So she has to wait until her 18th birthday before she can try out her prizes except in her own backyard. She hasn't tried it yet.

And there's no chance of her having a quiet ride on the sly. Her father is city police motorcycle officer Al Harwood.

Roxanna won third prize in a local counting contest. For this, she was entered in the national contest.

Two weeks ago Roxanna received a phone call from Toronto. She answered a question and the scooter was hers.

Roxanna was going to sell the scooter—until it arrived the other day from Italy.

She broke open the crate and fell in love with it. Now, according to her mother, she just sits on the scooter and pretends she's going somewhere.

Roxanna, who lives with her parents at 4171 Cedar Hill, attends Gordon Head School.

Planners Applaud Saanich Budget

A letter praising Saanich council's plan for a capital budget has been received from the Capital Region Branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

"... In its decision to acquire land, the council has shown the necessary initiative that will save its taxpayers a great deal of money," the letter said.

The group said it hoped voters in Saanich "will look with favor upon the proposed bylaws concerning capital budget and construction of two swimming pools on Dec. 11.

All-Candidates Meeting Brings No Controversy

An all-candidates meeting Wednesday night for city civic election candidates passed quietly with no reference to recent controversial endorsements of candidates by civic officials. (See story Page 45.)

B.C. Sales Tax Not Enough For Hospitals

By JACK FREY
Legislative Reporter

Why not use the hospital insurance portion of B.C.'s five-per-cent social services tax to pay for hospital construction?

This question has been asked by many persons who don't understand why Greater Victoria are being asked to vote Saturday on a two-mill tax for hospitals.

Why, they ask, should ratepayers be burdened with a new tax when the public is already paying sales tax for hospitals?

The answer, provided Wednesday by officials of the provincial health services and hospital insurance department, is simple: more than two per cent of the sales tax is being spent on health care.

B.C.'s hospital network is costing millions of dollars more than is available from the social services tax. In fact, the tax is failing to meet all the needs.

The sales tax for financing education, health and welfare services was boosted some years ago to five per cent, to include hospital insurance.

This tax is expected to dump $122,000,000 into provincial coffers during the current fiscal year which ends March 31, 1966.

On the assumption that "two-fifths or 40 per cent of the sales tax revenue is spent on hospital care, the government can expect $48,800,000 from this source."

Health department officials estimated the provincial government will have to spend $62,559,346 on hospitals in the current fiscal year. Of this $42,981,070 will be for the hospital insurance program and $19,568,276 for hospital-based mental health services.

In addition to the $62,559,346 estimate, the government expects to spend another $6,396,729 during the same period on preventive health services.

These multi-million-dollar figures represent the net cost to the British Columbia public, after federal government contributions are deducted for calculating the provincial budget.

The federal government contributes nothing toward the $19,000,000 cost of mental health services in B.C., although it pays grants of $2,000 a bed to communities where new hospitals are being built.

The provincial government, meanwhile, pays half the total cost of new hospital construction in the province, which has been averaging between $25,000 and $30,000 a bed, the officials said.

Clerk's Plea

A recent plea for more workers for the municipal election Saturday brought a good response, the city clerk's office said Wednesday.

About 100 workers will work under the direction of City Clerk Morran Waller from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at polling subdivisions on Government Street just west of Centennial Square.

Mid-Day Voters Will Score Twice

Voters in the Langford, Colwood, Mechoslin and Sooke area should skip the first and last hours of voting if they want to register votes on both school trustees and hospitals. All polling stations are the same, but the trustee vote is only from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., while the hospital polls are open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Arthur Freeman, candidate for chairman of Sidney Village Commission, said Wednesday a statement made by his opponent Andries Boas was "nebulous."

Referring to Mr. Boas' statement that Sidney is going to get a long-awaited overpass for automobiles at Mills Road, Mr. Freeman said it could not be started until the second section of the four-lane highway is under development.

He said many Sidney residents were assuming the overpass would be built immediately.

NEXT SPRING

"The chief engineers' department of the provincial government tells me they have no immediate indication of when the second highway section will be started, as plans have to be ratified and money allocated for this project," he said.

"I would assume that this could not take place before the next provincial budget in the spring. I feel the people of Sidney should be made aware that we should still negotiate with the highways department for an early development of this overpass."

Campus Gets Bang Out of Navy Visit

The navy made a big impression on the University of Victoria grounds Sunday.

But not the kind you'd think. The impression was, in fact, a jagged hole dug into a wooded section of the campus.

It was caused when naval demolition experts from Pacific Command wired several containers of crystallized ether with a small explosive charge and touched them off with a violent bang.

The ether was considered dangerous. The experts were called in after the safety officer for the chemistry department, Dr. Frank Robinson, discovered on a routine check that the ether had crystallized.

Known as Di-nitropropyl ether, it is used in liquid form. But frequent exposure with air had hardened it.

A university official said the ether was stored in a specially-built section of the basement of the Elliot Building. The section is used for storing all volatile materials.

The RCN demolition team was headed by Lt.-Cmdr. Ward Palmer, head of the Pacific Command's operational diving unit.

Deputy comptroller for the Canadian Armed Forces, Rear Admiral C. J. Dillon will pay a visit to west coast defence establishments between Monday and Wednesday next week.

City Offered Wide Choice

Nine Candidates Seeking Five Aldermanic Posts

There are five aldermanic offices to fill in the Victoria municipal election Saturday, and nine candidates.

Six candidates are seeking two-year terms (four offices to fill) and three are hard after the single one-year term left vacant by the decision of Ald. A. W. Toone to contest the mayoralty.

The three incumbents, Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, Ald. Lily Wilson and Ald. Robert Baird, are all seeking re-election.

HOSPITALS

The Association of Women Electors of Greater Victoria had all candidates fill out a questionnaire which included a query on the controversial hospital referendum to be decided by the ratepayers Saturday.

Two-year candidates in alphabetical order:

Robert Baird, a businessman, believes the community has a definite financial responsibility for hospitals, but maintains that there should be more help from the federal government.

SCHOOL TAX

He feels that the present method of school taxation is unsatisfactory and costs should be shown on separate tax notices. City rejuvenation should go forward hand-in-hand with far-sighted planning.

Victoria does not need urban renewal, in the opinion of J. Wesley Dickie, realtor. It has no new land to develop, and the time is not far distant when capital will need some place to go. Renewal can be done more efficiently by private resources.

No part of hospital costs should be paid by property tax. Senior governments should do the financing, Mr. Dickie believes.

URBAN RENEWAL

Let all of the people pay for hospital costs, not just the landowner, maintains publisher Geoffrey Edgelow, a senior alderman.

Improved facilities for the staff which deals with juvenile delinquency are needed, this alderman believes. Urban renewal should be extended to other rundown areas of the city as quickly as possible.

Quick action on a bridge across the harbor to relieve downtown traffic pressure is urged by Charles E. Kingsfield, and action is needed at once.

The Nechako Valley was first invaded by land-hungry settlers in the early 1900's. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway planned a townsite there and sold lots for a new city in 1914. It was named Vanderhoof after Herbert Vanderhoof of New York, social worker and author and one of the first landowners.

on one-way street traffic where possible.

Needless spending should be stopped, Mr. Kingsfield says, and, if possible, the line held on taxes. A stronger police force with more cars is a necessity, and action should be taken on construction of a convention hall by all area municipalities.

Hugh R. Stephens, mentioned earlier as a candidate for mayor, and holder of many posts in the civic and cultural life of the city, believes that what is needed is a complete reappraisal of relationships, functional and fiscal, between the provincial government and municipalities.

CITY PLAN

Enthusiastic about the recently completed over-all plan for the city, Mr. Stephens believes all resources, human and otherwise, should be marshaled to put the plan into operation.

Two years chairman of the health and welfare committee of city council, Lily Wilson is seeking re-election as alderman.

"All people should share the cost and not just land-owners," she states in answer to a query on the hospital issue.

All the recommendations of the recent study on juvenile delinquency are important, says Mrs. Wilson, but outstanding needs are for a new court building and a supplemented probation staff to cope with the increasing number of delinquent families.

ton believes that while there are other means of obtaining capital to build hospitals, nevertheless the need is urgent and he favors the regional scheme with the planned two-mill levy.

Similarly with school costs. Headache though they may be, they are a community responsibility and everybody should pay whether they have children or not.

Mr. Frampton feels that the city is badly in need of a convention-community centre which would bring much revenue.

HEAVY LOAD

Mrs. Evelyn MacKenzie, who has been a candidate for council before, feels that property owners are carrying a heavy enough load now without adding the cost of hospitals to their burden. Senior governments should carry more of the expense.

A special committee should be established for children and youth, and there should be more study and co-operation on the whole problem of delinquency.

YOUNGSTERS

Contractor William H. Williams says sick people should be in the hospital and not at home. With 1,500 waiting for beds, the area should get the accommodation and then settle with senior governments later.

Get children off the streets and into gymnasiums, parks and recreation areas to aid juvenile delinquency, he urges. A busy juvenile is a happy one and not a bad one.

New Brain Trust Aids Arts Council

OTTAWA (CP) — Formation of a 15-member panel to advise the Canada Council on the needs of the academic community and to assist in forming policies and programs was announced Wednesday by the council.

The panel, headed by Prof. John F. Graham of Dalhousie University's economics department, represents the humanities and social sciences.

One of its functions will be appraisal of applications for grants in aid of research and other special projects. The panel will also replace the council's former method of consultation for a final review of the scholarship and fellowship competitions in the humanities and social sciences.

Formation of an advisory arts panel will be announced shortly the council said.

The first settlers came to the Burns Lake area in 1904. In 1917 the first sale of town lots took place. Before that there was only the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway station and a group of tents.

Baun Injury Hurts Out Here Labrosse Goes East on Loan

As had been expected, the knee injury which has put defenceman Bobby Baun out of action for about six weeks has had its repercussions in Victoria. In personnel changes dictated by Baun's injury, Victoria Maple Leafs have been called on to loan defenceman Claude Labrosse to Rochester Americans, the Toronto-owned American Hockey League club.

Labrosse was scheduled to fly East today but is expected to be returned by the first of the year. At Rochester, he will likely replace either Larry Hillman or Al Arbour. Toronto coach Punch Imlach hadn't made up his mind yesterday which Rochester defencemen would be promoted to the National Hockey League club but it appeared certain it would either be Hillman or Arbour.

With Don Cherry on the injured list, the recall left the Americans with only three defencemen and with five on the Victoria roster, Imlach split the difference between Toronto's two top farm teams.

LITZ RETURNS
Labrosse will reach Rochester only a few days ahead of Ed Litzenberger, who is returning to his former club as per agreement. Litzenberger will probably play his last game for Victoria against Hershey Bears of the AHL on Saturday night. The veteran centreman came here as a replacement for Larry Keenan with the understanding he would return to Rochester when Keenan had recovered from his October knee operation.

Keenan has been scrimmaging with the Leafs for more than a week and will likely see his first action Saturday. If he shows that he is ready to play, Litzenberger will leave Monday.

In another Toronto switch yesterday, centre Wally Boyer was called up to the NHL club and replaced at Rochester by left-winger Larry Jeffrey.

Hershey Hockey Is Unique More Fans Than Citizens

Hershey Bears, who will provide some tough opposition for Victoria Maple Leafs at Memorial Arena Saturday night, represent a little Pennsylvania city which has an almost fabulous hockey tradition.

Hershey is a community of about 6,000 people yet the Bears consistently draw between 7,000 and 8,000 to their home games. Fans regularly travel from as far as 100 miles for games and Hershey often matches attendance figures of such metropolitan areas as Baltimore, Buffalo and Cleveland for a season.

And hockey night in Hershey provides quite a spectacle for anyone who will bother to go to the top of the hill overlooking the Hershey Sports Centre. The lights of cars for miles around in every direction can be seen as fans head for "Chocolate Town."

It all started in 1857 when M. S. Hershey was born in a farm home that is now part of a school to which he left a fortune of more than $84,000,000 for the education of American orphan boys.

When he was 40 years old, after two business failures, Mr. Hershey became interested in making chocolate. That was the beginning of the Hershey Chocolate Company and, ultimately, the Hershey Bears. And, one could say, of the city of Hershey.

Stankiewicz, brother of a former NHL star—Ed; Bob Lettier, who spent much of the previous three seasons in Boston; Wayne Rivers, Chuck Hamilton, Bruce Cline and Jeannot Gilbert complete Hershey's forward complement.

The Bears opened their four-game tour of the WHL in San Francisco last night. In their only previous try against WHL opposition they were beaten at home by Portland Buckaroos, 1-0.

Cupit Brothers Lead Four-Ball

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP)—A pair of Texas brothers with hot putters and two reformed professionals fired nine-under-par 63s Wednesday and took the lead after the first round of the $125,000 PGA four ball championship.

Jacky Cupit, 27, of Dallas, and his brother, Buster, 33, of Longview, birdied seven holes to move into the tie with the team of Paul Bondeeson of Palm Springs, Calif., and Larry Mowry of Portland, Ore., which collected seven birdies and an eagle in their round.

Trailing by one stroke at 64 were Ross Coon Jr. of Newport, R.I., and Bob Crowley of Weston, Mass. Six of the 107 two-man teams seeking $20,000 first place money carded 65s. The biggest names in the tournament—Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus—shot a 67. Nicklaus said he and Palmer "just weren't concentrating."

Seeks Crocks

Bob Vining is looking for rednecks from the old Victoria Commercial Hockey League. The oldtimers are holding a practice soon to prepare for a game against Newy oldtimers Dec. 17 at Esquimalt Sports Centre. Those interested are asked to phone Vining at GR 9-4319.

Namath Rejection Gets Explanation

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Army concedes "It may seem illogical" that quarterback Joe Namath, signed by New York Jets for $400,000 to play professional football, should be found unfit for military service. But, says the army, as a professional football player Namath has doctors and trainers close by at every game and practice. "In the military service, these conditions would not necessarily be present."

Nykoluk, along with seven of his teammates, has seen Western Hockey League action with Winnipeg Warriors. Other Bears who have shown at Memorial Arena in seasons past are goalkeeper Claude DuFour (Seattle), defencemen Howie Yanosik (Saskatoon, Brandon and Edmonton), Ralph Keller (Vancouver) and Nick Polano (Edmonton) and forwards Roger DeJordy (Edmonton), Gene Ubrisco (New Westminster), and Gary Dornhoefer (San Francisco).

Paul Popell and Barry Ashbee, former Victoria Shamrock lacrosse star, and Mike Mahoney are other defencemen, but Ashbee is still up with Boston Bruins.

Bruce Draper, who played with many of Saturday's opponents two seasons back in Denver; Pete Conacher, son of the famous Charlie; Myron

Turkey Shoot Scheduled For Weekend

Marksmen who have their shooting eye get a chance this weekend to fill their larders with turkeys for Christmas. The Victoria Fish and Game Association has scheduled a two-day shoot—Saturday and Sunday starting at 10 a.m. each day and continuing until dark at its Goldstream grounds.

There will be a 22-calibre rifle competition and scattergunners will compete in "A", "B", "C", "D" and novice events. The shoots are open and there is ample parking and a heated clubhouse.

Pete Conacher

homa Sooners in the Big Eight Conference. "We just couldn't match what the Cardinals offered him," Bomber coach Bud Grant said Wednesday.

Grant said he was keenly disappointed that the Winnipeg club failed in its bid to obtain Brown, but added:

"We went as far as we could go for a rookie of his calibre." Brown, attending Oklahoma University on an athletic scholarship, is reported to have received a $6,000 bonus for signing with the Cardinals.

If Brown makes the grade with St. Louis, he will be the first Manitoba-born player to play in the NFL. Les Lear, who grew up in Winnipeg but was born in North Dakota, played with Cleveland Rams several years ago. Lear learned his football here.

MANY BIDDERS

The 220-pound Brown also had offers from New York Jets, Miami, Dallas and Minnesota. Grant made an undisclosed offer to him in a long-distance telephone call Tuesday.

Brown, who stands six feet, four inches, played high school football in Winnipeg while attending St. Paul's College and St. James Collegiate.

Toronto Club Gets Subsidy

TORONTO (CP)—The Toronto Maple Leaf baseball team will be operating in the International League for another year at least with the help of a $30,000 grant approved Wednesday night by city council.

Club representatives said they had losses of about $232,000 in the last two years and could not continue without the grant.

Mayor Philip Givens, who voted in favor of the grant, said the club probably will need similar grants for another two or three years.

U.S. Jails B.C. Lawyer

PORTLAND (CP)—A British Columbia lawyer wanted by the RCMP on a theft charge is in jail here for defrauding an innkeeper.

Christopher C. Ryan of Penticton was fined $200 in municipal court Monday and is serving the fine at the rate of $5 a day in Multnomah County jail.

Ryan disappeared from his home in late August. Police said more than $12,000 was missing from his law firm.

A charge of theft over $50 was laid against him by Penticton RCMP.

Alfred Urbano, immigration officer here, said today Ryan was arrested Saturday on the defrauding charge and also on a fugitive warrant.

He said Ryan is wanted in Moses Lake, Wash., to face a charge of grand larceny.

He said the immigration service has a hearing scheduled for Ryan Dec. 22—provided he is not still in jail.

Urbano said Ryan eventually would be turned over to the RCMP.

Billy Brown Feels Better—Doctors Unsure

HONOLULU (AP) — Billy Brown, 3, who was taken off a liner in a serious condition, continued his trip to New Zealand Wednesday although doctors still do not know what ails him. He feels better, physicians say, but still has a high blood count and every third day his temperature rises to 102 or 103 degrees. Billy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brown, was taken from the P & O Orient liner Canberra while en route with his mother and two other Brown children from Canada to a new home in New Zealand. He was semi-conscious and in great pain when admitted to Queen's Hospital. Now he is 400 persons contributed $5,155 to help Billy.

"I think the response from the Americans has been absolutely wonderful," said Russell T. Landale, British consul who is putting Billy aboard a Canadian Pacific Airlines plane Wednesday.

Mrs. Brown stayed aboard the Canberra with her other children. The family went to Canada from New Zealand six years ago. Finding the going difficult, Mr. Brown returned to New Zealand and sent for his family.

OTTAWA (CP) — Salary increases for about 9,000 professional federal civil servants will be announced today.

A spokesman for Revenue Minister Benson said the treasury board—a cabinet committee that oversees government spending—met Wednesday to decide on the pay recommendations.

Any increases are expected to be retroactive to July 1. The treasury board will meet next week to consider pay increase recommendations for some 67,000 clerical and administrative federal employees.

Friend Says:

Accused Studied Sadism

HYDE, England (Reuters)—A 27-year-old clerk accused of killing two school children thinks an 18th century French writer, the Marquis de Sade, had the right outlook on life, one of his friends told a court here Wednesday.

David Smith, 17, told of books on sadism and sexual perversion he borrowed from Ian Brady, on trial on a triple murder charge.

Smith said one book was The Life and Ideas of the Marquis de Sade.

Smith said: "He (Brady) said it was a good book, and that de Sade had the right outlook on life. He hated other people. He used to call them morons."

The Marquis de Sade, whose name gave rise to the word "sadism" to describe the psychological condition of receiving sexual pleasure through inflicting pain on another person, was imprisoned in France for vicious practices.

SEX THEME

He wrote novels and plays and attempted to set out a philosophical basis for his sexual deviations before dying in a lunatic asylum in 1814.

The prosecution alleges Smith saw Brady kill Edward Evans, 17, by hatchet blows and strangulation. Smith is expected to give evidence on this today.

Brady also is alleged to have killed 12-year-old Lesley Ann Downey and 10-year-old John Kilbride. Their bodies were recovered from shallow peat graves 400 yards apart on bleak Saddleworth Moor, close to this smoke-grimed northern mill town, the court was told Wednesday.

Brady's blonde girlfriend, Esther Myra Hindley, 23, is jointly accused of murdering Evans and Lesley Downey.

The prosecution alleged the pair photographed the graves and also had pornographic pictures of the girl in the nude. The boy appeared to have been sexually assaulted.

Smith said he had met Brady 16 months ago. Brady had talked during car outings and wine-drinking parties about taking up a life of crime.

GOOD SHOT

Brady, an excellent revolver shot with either hand, took him shooting on the moors, Smith said. They discussed using guns to rob banks.

Earlier the magistrates heard tape recordings which the prosecution said were of the voices of the defendants and Lesley Downey.

Contents of the recordings were not disclosed. The prosecution said Miss Hindley wept and said she was ashamed and Brady stood with head bowed when the recordings were played to them.

Brady denied the killings, blaming the children's deaths on a man whose name he said he gave to his lawyers.

Computer Polices Pensions

OTTAWA (CP)—A huge computer system will be acquired by the federal government to maintain records and calculate individual benefits under the Canada Pension Plan.

The finance department said Wednesday the computer is larger in most respects than any other in Canada.

Records to be maintained under the pension plan are so large it would not be practicable to maintain them by manual methods, the department said.

The computer system will have to record approximately 12,000,000 individual reports of contributors' earnings in 1966 and will file on magnetic tape information on the contributions and earnings of each individual covered by the pension plan.

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

Christmas. Christmas. Christmas.

Everywhere you go the bells are jingling, lights are sparkling from wondrous colored trees and Santa is already on the road.

Nowhere was it more Christ-mas-y than in the Crystal ball-room at the Empress yesterday afternoon (I shudder at the very thought of pulling this place down.)

The occasion was an annual Women's Canadian Club Christmas tea and Eleanor Macdonell and helpers had really gone to town in decking out the hall.

Tables were decorated in traditional red and green, poinsettias, fir and holly with red satin ribbon over the greenery. A bowl filled with red carnations and white chrysanthemums centred the head table.

Mrs. G. E. Pearkes, honorary president, was there wearing a Christmas looking whimsy, red bow and veil, and Mrs. W. A. G. Bennett, honorary vice president was also at the head table.

Though the place was beautiful with an honest to goodness lighted fir tree on the stage and the tea was as good as always at the Empress it was really John Dunbar's singing that made the party.

And tall, gracious Grace Timp, dressed in turquoise blue with matching turban, gave him the best in accompaniment.

It was the first time I had heard Jock since he returned from Scotland and he is better than ever. And he sang Silent Night, my favorite carol although I must say he got a more rousing response from the audience for Come, All Ye Faithful.

He sang other favorites both seasonal and otherwise and for his all-girl audience, all 425 of them, a love song.

Everyone loved it and they gave Jock a big hand when he ended the over half hour program.

Sitting next to Nora Wallace she told me that three years ago when they were in Scotland they saw and heard Jock on a New Year's Eve TV show and how it had made them both homesick and a little sad. So I guess Jock had better consider himself at least half a Victorian.

Mrs. Macdonell and Mrs. P. B. Bennett did the honors of pouring at the head table and others at this table were Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar, Mrs. Timp, president, Elizabeth Forbes, Mrs. P. M. Corbett, Mrs. M. H. Youson, Miss Ethel Bruce, Miss Kathleen Agnew, Miss Jessie Gordon, Miss Mary Ashworth, Mrs. John Brown, Mrs.

Wallace, Mrs. Frank Mack, Mrs. A. B. Young, Pat Dutoit and myself.

Pourers at guest tables were Mrs. R. W. Mayhew, Mrs. H. L. Smith, Mrs. T. H. Johns, Mrs. F. G. Aldous, Mrs. Kenneth Drury, Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Mrs. Gordon Wismer, Dr. Olga Jardine, Mrs. H. L. Campbell, Mrs. A. B. Young, Mrs. T. C. Evans, Mrs. Dal MacLeod, Mrs. C. L. Smith, Mrs. A. S. Stringer, Mrs. T. C. Hamilton, Mrs. H. J. Hambliss, Mrs. F. J. Smet, Mrs. Archibald Donald, Mrs. Douglas Leechman, Mrs. A. T. C. Cowley, Mrs. W. G. Flett, Mrs. Bruce Hutchison, Mrs. C. W. Paulin, Mrs. W. Redford, Mrs. W. F. Pinfold, Mrs. R. H. McDougall, Mrs. H. H. Henderson, Mrs. R. A. Lipsey, Mrs. R. E. Jeffels, Mrs. P. J. Mulcahey, Mrs. George Ewart, Mrs. H. A. Powell, Mrs. H. B. Elworthy, Mrs. Norman Featherstone, Miss Margaret Sanson, Mrs. J. R. Howard, Mrs. Malcolm Taylor, Miss Margaret Clay, Mrs. K. O. Wright and Mrs. A. H. Sheard.

Mrs. Dal MacLeod, Mrs. T. C. Evans and Mrs. Corbett were the ones who helped with the decorations.

Debutante Parties

Debutante, Elizabeth Edgewood, is having a tea on Sunday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Edgewood when other guests will be the debutantes who were presented to the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Pearkes at the United Services ball last month.

Another deb, Joan Weisman is having a luncheon on the 18th at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reg Wenman. Two of the deb's won't be there, Barbara Bonner is working in a department store during the holidays and Yvonne McCandless is writing an important exam.

Sherry Before Dinner

Members and associate members of the Victoria Symphony Society Women's Committee gathered at the Cadboro Bay Road home of Mrs. Percy Humphrey where they were served sherry before going on to their annual dinner and Christmas party at the Empress. Mrs. Harold Mackney was convener of the party at which several members of the Midway Symphony group were special guests.

Brown Chrysanthemums

Edith Gussling who is serving a two year term on the Seaside Council was guest of honor at the coffee party given yesterday morning by Mrs. Harry Gladwell. According to Gwen Cash this was the most animated political party ever. "They didn't just stand around as they usually do at this type of party," said Gwen. "Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves."

Caroline Gladwell agreed that the party had gone off well and she insisted that the chrysanthemums on the table were brown, not bronze as I suggested. She should know, having grown them herself in her own greenhouse.

Mrs. W. B. Dockrill assisted the hostess and poured exactly one cup of tea.

Musicians Entertain Patients

A group of local singers and musicians entertained patients and staff of Veterans' Hospital at a special Christmas concert Wednesday evening. The concert was presented in the hospital pavilion by Victoria Unit No. 12, Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans.

Mistress of ceremonies was singer Irene McAllister. Others performing were Dave Gibson on the accordion, Johnnie Byzick on the banjo, Cec Boulter at the piano, and singers Alice Syrett, Joan Buttery, Enid Green, Alec Stewart and Reg Stoffer.

Higgins-Coxworth Vows

Bride Wears Heirloom Bracelet

An heirloom gold bracelet belonging to the bride's grandmother was the "something old" worn by Carol Coxworth when she became the bride of Jay Higgins of Parkville, V.I.

Rev. W. Van Druten performed the ceremony in St. Aidan's church for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Coxworth, Dunlevy Street and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Higgins of Parkville.

All white baskets filled with white chrysanthemums and green ferns were at the altar. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a traditional gown of lace dotted with lace rosettes outlined in seed pearls and applied on the fitted bodice and skirt front. The softly flared skirt fell in a wattle train from a tiny bridal bow at the back. Her tiered veil of illusion mingled from a small organza rosette and she carried white carnations and cerise sweetheart roses in her bouquet.

The senior attendants carried crescent bouquets of pink carnations while the junior bridesmaid carried a colonial bouquet of matching flowers. They all wore headresses on tone and single drop pearl necklaces, gift of the bride.

Mr. Ed Higgins was best man for his brother. Ushering guests to their pews were Mr. Gerry Bone and Mr. Sandy Horsland. A handmade lace cloth, made by the bride's grandmother, covered the head table at a reception which followed in the Highlands Golf Club. Centering the table was a three-tiered cake flanked on each side by pale pink candles in silver candleholders and pale pink sweetheart rosebuds. Mr. Alex Crawford proposed the toast to the bride.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I was offended by your cutting reply to the woman who wanted to be the sole breadwinner in the family while her husband kept house. You said she was "kooked up" and called her "Sir."

Surely you know many people are unaccustomed to the roles which society decrees they must play. Some men don't belong in the business world and some women don't belong in the home. In Australia, for example, certain aborigine tribes practice complete reversal of the roles as we know them. The women do the hunting, make the tribal decisions and run the family. The men stay home, care for the children, do the cooking and primp (like our women) so they will be attractive to their wives. According to anthropologists they are reasonably content.

Personally, I believe the lady who wrote will be happier (and so will her husband) if they do what comes naturally and are not concerned with what others think.—INTERESTED READER

Dear Interested: If these people lived in the Australian bush they would have no problem, but in Hartford if they changed roles they might well be considered peculiar. I entered no judgement as to whether it was right or wrong. I did say they are bound to be considered oddballs—and believe me, they would be.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 20-year-old girl who lives with my married sister and her husband. I have a good job in a bank.

My sister is wonderful to me but I hate her husband. He calls my sister "stupid and ignorant." If he doesn't feel like going out he makes her cancel her plans at the last minute. If HE wants to go out, she has to go. No matter how tired she is.

My sister is a beautiful girl. If she left this or she could marry a man who would treat her like a queen. The vice-president of the bank has asked me questions about her. When I told her, she said, "Forget it. Bill is a good father. That means a lot to me."

How can I save my sister from throwing away her life on this rat?—STANDING BY.

Dear Sis: If you were "Standing By" it would be lovely, but you are actively trying to break up your sister's marriage which is quite a different ball of wax. Move. You'll all be better off.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the woman whose neighbor

CHAMPION For Saanich

(Inserted by Champion Committee)

At times I questioned the wisdom of my teaching (for example when I had to wade through the flock to get to my clothes line) but I know now I was right.

Today, each of our five sons is a wonderful husband and father. They are respected by their colleagues and deeply concerned with the lot of their fellow man. The early teaching paid off.—DETROIT MOTHER.

Dear Mother: What a heart-warming letter! Do you have a snapshot of your boys walking "like shepherds in the midst of a flock"? I hope so. (And if you do, I'd love to see it.)

For 17 wonderful years we had stray cats and dogs on our porch from all over town. Our boys walked to school like shepherds in the midst of a flock.

This English Horse Is a People

LONDON — Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy and Queen Elizabeth shared honors with a horse in a published list of "the 12 most glamorous people in the world." The horse was Arkle, Britain's champion steeplechaser, and the author of the list was Angus McGill, men's columnist of the London Evening Standard. As for the horse, McGill commented: "Anyone misguidedly enough to complain that horses aren't people is not a true born Englishman."

'Baby Bandits' Shock Magistrate

Two 15-year-old boy bandits were each sentenced to two years less one day in jail for a series of crimes last month. The boys had pleaded guilty to two charges of car stealing, to assault with intent to steal, attempted robbery and theft under the value of $50.

'DISTURBING'

Magistrate Ostler said: "It is extremely disturbing to see boys of this tender age committing a series of such serious offences."

"They have a shocking background of offences and I am shocked by their detached attitude towards these offences."

"They are baby bandits at ready."

NEED DISCIPLINE

Defence counsel Allan Cox said both boys needed strong discipline and their predicament stemmed from family trouble.

"There is a strong possibility they can be rehabilitated," Mr. Cox said.

A thief who dived headfirst through a plate glass window and hauled only when a police man threatened to shoot received two years in jail in central magistrate's court Wednesday.

CHANGED PLEA

Stephen Cassidy, 627 Bay, changed an earlier plea of not guilty and Wednesday admitted breaking into Shirley McArree Florist, 2043 Cadboro Bay, Oct. 31.

William Astrop, of the same address, has pleaded not guilty. Cassidy told Magistrate William Ostler he had been freed from jail five days before the crime took place. He had a list of convictions for theft, assault, break-ins, keeping liquor for sale, indecent exposure and mischief.

Jail Fugitives

Get Stiff Terms

GUELPH (CP) — Two youths were sentenced to penitentiary terms when they pleaded guilty Wednesday to charges arising from a break-out at Guelph reformatory Nov. 23 during which a civilian instructor was injured.

John H. Decourcy, 18, of Toronto and Yarmouth, N.S., was sentenced to four years in addition to the term he was serving. Kenneth R. Graham, 18, Toronto and Theford, Ont., was given an additional two years.

Negro Exhibit

At Smithsonian?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution is planning its first permanent exhibit devoted to Negro history. Frank A. Taylor, director of museums, says the exhibit will trace the history of the civil rights movement from the earliest slave days to the 1963 march on Washington.

Magistrate Ostler said: "One would think that you like being in jail."

Replied Cassidy: "It leaves a lot to be desired."

CHECKED STORES

Constable Robert Smirl testified in the trial of Astrop that he was on patrol Oct. 31 and at 9:45 p.m. was doing a check on a chain of stores on Cadboro Bay Road.

He said he separated from his companion, Auxiliary Constable Ronald Morgan, and checked a service station.

"I heard Constable Morgan call my name and blow his whistle," Constable Smirl said.

MAN RUNNING

"I saw a man run from behind the chain of stores. It was raining quite hard. He ran towards me, up a bank; his head was down.

"When he was three or four feet from me I grabbed him and asked him, 'What's going on here.'"

He identified the man in court as Astrop.

LOOKED SCARED

"He looked at me," Constable Smirl said. "His eyes were wild; he looked scared. He said, 'There's a guy behind the store ... he wants to fight me.'"

"I then saw a man in the florist's running through the store towards the window. He lowered his head and crashed through the window and fell to the ground."

RAN AWAY

Constable Smirl said the man began running away at an angle from him.

"When he was 30 or 60 feet away I shouted 'Stop or I will shoot,'" he said. "The man stopped and raised his hands."

He identified this man as Cassidy.

BOUGHT HELP

Constable Smirl said Astrop said that Cassidy had been trying to fight him and that he (Astrop) saw Constable Smirl and came for help.

Constable Smirl, a physical education instructor at the YMCA, said he examined a rear window of the florist and said the easiest, most logical way of gaining entry was for one person to help another up.

WINDOW OPEN

"A person would have to be in exceptionally good physical condition to be able to keep up to the window," he said.

The window was wide open, he said.

In cross-examination he agreed that a person could have entered by the back door if it was unlocked, and then locked it behind him.

The front and back doors were locked when the police arrived. He also agreed that his investigation gave no indication that Astrop had been on the premises.

The case will continue Monday.

Part anger and part drink caused Daphne Davenport to dart between cars Tuesday night shouting obscenities.

She gave this explanation after pleading guilty to causing a public disturbance and wilfully damaging a car radio aerial valued at $7.

SHOUTING, SWEARING

Det. Lyle Somers said Miss Davenport was shouting at people in cars and on the sidewalk at Yates and Cook at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

He said Miss Davenport spat on the hood of a car stopped for a red light and ripped the aerial off.

Magistrate Ostler said: "You can't be allowed to carry on this way indefinitely."

He remanded her to Dec. 15 for a pre-sentence and medical report.

Two 18-year-old girls pleaded guilty to theft over and under $50.

The girls, Sharon Brown and Mary Carol Douglas, both of 719 Princess, were remanded to Dec. 15 for a pre-sentence report.

Policewoman Kay Althouse said the girls took two women's suits and two pairs of pyjamas from Eaton's, 1150 Douglas, Tuesday and later the same day took a set of drapes and two pairs of pyjamas from Woolworth's, 1204 Douglas.

NOT TOO FLUSH

Robert Birdgenaw had six cents on him when police stopped him at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday. He pleaded guilty to vagrancy and was remanded to today for sentence.

Another vagrant, Henry Smith, was given two months in jail after pleading guilty. Smith, who had no money when stopped by police, had a record of break-ins.

Stanley Lien had a dollar in change but no job and no place to sleep Tuesday night. He also pleaded guilty to vagrancy and was remanded to Dec. 16 for a pre-sentence report.

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States embassy announced Wednesday that Harmon air force base in Newfoundland will be closed by Dec. 31, 1966.

More than 900 Canadian civilians are employed at the U.S. air force base in western Newfoundland.

No Scrimping This Go-Around In de Gaulle's Run-Off Fight

PARIS (AP) — President de Gaulle formally announced Wednesday his candidacy for the Dec. 19 runoff presidential election and aides said he won't scrimp on campaigning this time.

After two days of reflection, de Gaulle told his cabinet he is remaining in the race for another seven-year term. Officials said he will use most of the campaign time allowed him on the state-owned radio and television networks.

He used the networks sparingly in his campaign for the first round of voting Sunday.

RUNNER-UP

De Gaulle will face Francois Mitterrand, 49, the leftist backed by the Communists, Socialists and his own small non-Communist group. Mitterrand was runner-up in Sunday's test with 31.71 per cent of the popular vote.

De Gaulle led the field in the first round with 44.63 per cent, far short of the endorsement he expected. A total of 50 per cent plus one was required for election on the first ballot. Only the top two contenders can enter the runoff.

Senator Jean Lecanuet, a man with potential influence on the runoff outcome, announced he will remain silent until today. A centre-left candidate, Lecanuet finished third Sunday with 15.57 per cent of the vote.

Lecanuet, blamed by the Gaullists for depriving the president of a first-ballot victory, met with his own aides and later announced his followers had agreed on a position in the runoff and other matters. Either de Gaulle or Mitterrand technically could withdraw before midnight Thursday night, when their candidacies become official, and thus bring Lecanuet into the running again.

Old Ladies Bilked

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police Wednesday arrested four men accused of participation in an ingenious nationwide scheme that bilked well-to-do elderly women of an estimated $2,000,000.

In three months operation in the Los Angeles area women ranging in age from 70-89 years had been victimized to the extent of about $200,000, police estimated.

Those arrested Wednesday were identified as James D. Walsh, 47, the asserted ring-leader, of North Hollywood; Al Thompson, 51, Hollywood; James Trent, 35, Los Angeles; and Leslie Knox Erwin, also known as Joe Sampson, 36, a Canadian who declined to give a local address. All were charged with grand theft.

WITHDRAW FUNDS

Police said the suspects tried to lure four of bank failures in their victims to get them to withdraw large sums.

One 81-year-old woman from Glendale was the victim of a plot that netted $37,000, according to officers.

But police began investigating another elderly woman's case when a bank reported she tried to withdraw $20,000, refusing to accept a cashier's cheque.

The smallest amount taken from any woman locally was $4,000, police said. The operation extended into New York state, the middle eastern states and Atlanta, Ga.

Police said the members of the ring somehow got information on elderly women with large sums of money. They then would telephone, describing themselves as investigators and reminding each woman of recent bank failures in the west.

They would claim their investigation convinced them that the bank in which the woman had her money was victimized by dishonest bankers.

SWORN TO SECRECY

The woman then would be asked to withdraw a specific sum of money to help in the investigation, with the promise of an additional $500 to be returned with the principal when the investigation was completed. Each victim was sworn to secrecy.

A taxi was sent to take the woman to the bank.

CONFEDERATE AT DOOR

The women were watched closely as they withdrew the money, and received a telephone call immediately upon their return home, police said. At about the same time, a confederate would ring the doorbell, flash a detective's badge, and accept the money, investigators continued.

In some cases, the bureau arranged for the women to call again, asking for more money. The same procedure was followed the second call.

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI Wednesday closed the historic ecumenical council in an outdoor ceremony of medieval pomp and pageantry in St. Peter's Square with a new plea for world peace he hoped would "reach the hearts of everyone."

"The in peace," (go in peace) the pontiff told the more than 2,300 council fathers who painstakingly hammered out 16 decrees which reformed Roman Catholicism and opened a new era in relations with other Christian and non-Christian churches.

From a scarlet-canooped throne on the apron of the huge basilica of St. Peter, facing cardinals and bishops wearing white capes and mitres, formally dressed delegates from more than 80 nations, black clad priests and nuns, Romans in their holiday best and others massed in the square, the pontiff intoned the words of Jesus:

WORDS OF JESUS

"Peace I leave with you, my peace I give you. Not as the world gives do I give to you."

The late Pope John XXIII, predecessor to Pope Paul, convened the council Oct. 11, 1962, to renew the church and pave the way for Christian unity.

LIKE BELL

Pope Paul wished his closing salute to the council to "be like the ring of a bell reaching heaven."

"The council is now finally closed — this immense and extraordinary assembly now ends," he said of the more than three years of deliberations in which liberal and traditionalist prelates often clashed on how the church should face the future and the rest of the world.

LIBERTY

As if to signal the changes the council had worked, the Pope addressed a series of unique messages at its close to all walks of mankind.

To government leaders, he said: "Your task . . . is to be the promoters of order and peace among men." He said the church asked but one thing from governments—"Liberty."

SEPARATION

One of the major council decrees, on religious liberty, affirmed the principle of church-state separation — sometimes cloudy in Catholic countries — and proclaimed for the first time that all men have the right to worship according to the dictates of their conscience.

Another decree of the church in the modern world laid down new guidelines on contemporary issues, from nuclear warfare to the population explosion.

To scientists, the Pope said: "Your road is ours." He bade them to "continue your search . . . without ever despairing of the truth."

To women, he said the church "is proud to have glorified and liberated" them. He urged women to "hold back the hand of man who, in a moment of folly, might attempt to destroy human civilization."

Council decrees left the door open to possible changes in the church's flat rejection of artificial means of birth control. They also outlawed discrimination against women on the basis of sex.

The Pope addressed no message directly to other faiths. But in the vast crowd, estimated at about 200,000 under the sunny autumn sky, were hundreds of clergymen of Protestant, Jewish and other faiths who had followed the work of the council, generally with approval.

A council document on Christian unity permits common prayer with separated brethren, promotes joint studies of theological differences and confesses the church shares some of the historical guilt for Christian schisms.

Another decree on relations with non-Christians for the first time in Catholic history praised unique values in other religions and cleared the Jewish people of collective responsibility in the crucifixion of Christ. It commits the Roman Catholic Church squarely against anti-Semitism.

The provincial cabinet Tuesday fired the mate who led a walkout from the ferry Powell River Queen on Oct. 17 after a dispute with the skipper. An order-in-council fired C. N. Hospitals Big Issue

Three Incumbents Joined By Oak Bay Hopeful

A newcomer to Oak Bay politics, and three incumbents, are vying for election to three seats on municipal council.

Hubert Cashman, 65-year-old chartered accountant and nine-year resident of Oak Bay, faces Coun. Walter Dodswoth and Coun. William Wade, both after a third term, and Coun. Frances Elford, seeking her second term.

Three council seats are open, each for two-year terms.

HOUSEWIFE

Housewife Dorothy May Elford, 38, who seven years ago missed a seat on North Vancouver School Board by 27 votes, contests one available trusteeship with Peter Bunn, general contractor, seeking his third term.

Ratepayers will also vote on fluoridation, regional hospital, plan and school money referendum, about which issues the candidates had this to say:

BIGGER SHARE

Cashman—the federal and provincial governments should pay a greater proportion of school and hospital costs.

"I haven't studied all these things in dollars-and-cents detail. Being a chartered accountant, I will look into them as they face the municipality."

EFFICIENCY

"Mainly, I want to see efficiency and economy in the municipal government and to prevent taxes from rising too much in the future for residents of moderate incomes. I am extremely anxious to preserve the beauty and amenities of Oak Bay, while I realize we must progress. We can't maintain a little island just as it has always been."

CONFUSING

Mr. Dodswoth, 58, manager of the Butchart Gardens—"No one on council disagrees with the amount of money hospitals require. But I, and the rest of council, am opposed to the confusing methods used to thrust the concept of the regional plan on the public so suddenly. I don't think the plan should be put to a vote until a definite and positive plan is put forward and the people are educated to realize it is going to cost them more money."

NON-CONTRIBUTORS

"There are too many communities not contributing to the overall costs of hospitals."

"I am personally in favor of fluoridation, but I won't preach it to anyone. It's up to the people to vote the way they feel on it."

DUPLICATE TAX

Mrs. Elford, 51, seeking her second term—"The two-mill tax levy proposed in the regional hospital plan is duplicate taxation. We are being asked to pay again for facilities for which we have already paid a tax."

"The top two per cent of the five per cent sales tax was very definitely earmarked by the provincial government for hospitals."

GOVERNMENT WHIM

"In the past seven years, $44,000,000 went unexpended for hospitals. If this money had been used, every hospital in the province would be up to date and adequate in size."

"The per capita grant and other sources of revenue are determined at the whim of the provincial government of the day. I will urge council to spearhead a strong drive of citizens and other municipalities to force the provincial government to re-examine fiscal relationships and re-designate the services which can best be provided by each level of government."

REGIONAL PARKS

Mr. Wade, 50, provincial government hospital claims supervisor—"I am a strong supporter of inter-municipal co-operation and supported the regional parks scheme, Greater Victoria traffic survey and metropolitan sewer study."

"But I voted with the majority of council as being opposed to the regional hospital plan as it is being presented."

NEW FACILITIES

"I am a strong advocate of acquisition of new recreational facilities and against indiscriminate planning and zoning. Council must continue to strive to maintain taxes at a reasonable level while maintaining essential services to the municipality."

Holidays Extra Length

OTTAWA (CP)—Government employees will enjoy two week-ends of 3½ days over the holiday season, Acting Prime Minister Martin said Wednesday.

Civil servants are entitled to a paid holiday on the Mondays following Christmas and New Year's Day since they fall on a Saturday.

The government has backed on an extra half-day so civil servants will work only on the mornings of Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve.

The long week-ends are for civil servants "and all those employees of the public service outside the civil service, including prevailing rate employees and ships' officers and ships' crews," said Mr. Martin.

Nation's Economy, Poverty Discussed

By FRASER KELLY
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Eleven finance ministers and provincial treasurers gathered in the opulent confederation room of the parliament buildings today to discuss the nation's economy. Ironically, in much smaller rooms down the hall their officials will be discussing the profile of poverty in the nation. Acting federal finance minister Mitchell Sharp will chair the ministers meeting which is an annual pre-budget brain-picking session. Its purpose is to ensure that provincial budgets can be prepared to coincide rather than conflict with the federal budget. To do this, federal authorities provide projections of the economy for the next few months.

The provincial ministers are expected to push Mr. Sharp for a clear statement of what the federal government intends to do to combat inflation, and the nation's balance of payment problems.

RASMINSKY ADDRESS
Last year a spokesman for the Bank of Canada spoke to the ministers on the general economic health of the country. There has been speculation this year that the bank's governor Louis Rasminsky will address them.

The meetings themselves will be closed. A knowledgeable spokesman from Ontario said: "I doubt very much if we get any major fiscal or monetary policy statements from the federal government."

CAUTIOUS MOVES
This feeling was backed up by federal officials who expect Mr. Sharp, who is still only acting minister, to move cautiously.

The ministers will almost certainly discuss the recent move by the United States to curtail U.S. investment in this country. This could cost the provincial and federal governments millions in taxes.

The ministers are in effect wearing two hats for this visit to the capital.

On Friday they will meet as the federal-provincial tax structure committee, which is charged with the responsibility of providing a new federal-provincial tax formula by April 1, 1967.

They will receive a report from a committee of officials containing projections of revenue sources, expenditures and public debt until 1972.

PROGRESS REPORTS
They will also get progress reports on such federal-provincial problems as tax-sharing agreements, shared cost programs, equalization grants.

Most of the studies of the tax structure committee have not been completed. They won't be until various royal commissions and enquiries being conducted at the provincial level are finished.

PROBLEMS FOR SOME
The holding of the two economic conferences at the same time as the poverty conference is creating problems for several of the provincial economic advisers who have to attend all three.

Some of these advisers Tuesday expressed dismay at the lack of progress being made at the poverty conference. At least two provincial delegations said they were frustrated by the lack of specific proposals being offered by the federal officials to combat poverty.

Food Costs Jolt Consumer Index to New High

OTTAWA (CP)—Soaring food costs jolted the consumer price index to a record 140.2 in November. Its previous high was 139.5 in July.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday that the index, chief barometer of Canadian living costs, gained almost a full point from the October figure of 139.3.

In November of last year it stood at 135.8. That meant a jump in the year on index of 4.3 points, equal to 3.2 per cent. Economists say price gains should be held to between 1½ and two per cent in a year.

FOOD INCREASE

DBS said its cross-country check of November food prices—one of the major components in the index—showed an increase of 1.8 per cent from October levels.

"Substantially higher" prices were reported for eggs, potatoes, tomatoes, celery and lettuce. There were smaller gains for fresh milk, most beef and pork items, fish, poultry, lard, margarine, coffee, canned tomatoes, peaches and pears.

CLOTHING COSTS MORE

Higher costs were also reported in four of the other six index components—housing, clothing, health—personal care and recreation—reading. The transportation section was unchanged and the tobacco-alcohol index dipped slightly.

There is no exactly comparable index for family incomes but DBS compiles one on average industrial wages and salaries which also uses 1949 as the base. In September—latest available—this stood at 214.8 compared to 212.5 in August.

and 204.8 in the previous September.

The consumer price index is based on a sampling of prices for a fixed quantity of goods and services needed by urban families of from two to six persons. These are families who had incomes of between $2,500 and $7,000 a year in 1957 and live in centres of 30,000 population or over. Housing and food count for 60 per cent of the items checked.

The wage index is compiled from a wide list of industrial firms that employ 15 or more persons.

SEVEN COMPONENTS

DBS breaks its main price index down into seven components. Here is how each fared between October and November:

Food—index up to 139.3 from 137.5 with a wide list of price gains offsetting slightly lower prices for grapefruit, bananas, hamburger, bacon, lamb, veal, sugar, cake mix, powdered skim milk, onions and turnips.

Housing—index increased to 142 from 141.6 on higher costs of rent, taxes, repairs, furniture and household equipment. Fuel oil and household supplies were slightly down.

CLOTHING UP

Clothing—index moved to 123.7 from 123.2 on higher prices for piece goods and footwear. Men's and children's wear went up, women's wear unchanged.

Transportation—index unchanged from October at 148.7. Auto prices rose in some cities, balanced by drops in others. Gasoline and oil prices were higher but train fares were down.

Health and personal care—index ahead to 177.9 from 177. Prices of prescriptions and drugs were higher along with men's haircuts, women's hairdressing and personal supplies.

Recreation and reading—index up to 155 from 154.2 with increases in movie tickets, skating, hockey sticks and camera film.

Alcohol and tobacco—index down to 122.3 from 122.6 after scattered price decreases for cigarettes.

A river boat captain during the Fraser gold rush, brought a cargo of whisky to Hill's Bar to sell to the Indians. White miners offered to buy it to avoid trouble. But when the captain refused their price they took it from him by force and poured it into the river.

Canada Extends Rhodesia Bans

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada announced Wednesday extension of its ban on imports of Rhodesian goods.

Acting Prime Minister Martin said at a press conference the embargo now will cover 90 per cent of Rhodesian exports to Canada.

These totalled $4,300,000 in 1964. New commodities being banned are ferrochrome, chrome ores and concentrates, asbestos and canned and cooked meats.

Sugar, Rhodesia's main export to Canada, was banned Nov. 28. "These measures reflect Canadian support for the United Nations and the Canadian government's belief that effective economic action should be taken to bring to an early end the illegal situation in Rhodesia," Mr. Martin said.

"The Rhodesian situation has created a serious threat to Commonwealth unity and African stability."

CANBERRA (Reuters)—Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies Wednesday announced an intensification of Australia's economic sanctions against Rhodesia.

The ban on Rhodesian imports will be extended to ferro-alloys, chrome ore and asbestos.

Douglas Scores Pearson

40 Baitu Calamist, Victoria, Thursday, Dec. 9, 1965

'Do-Nothing' Liberals

VANCOUVER (CP) — T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, said Wednesday the Pearson government has done nothing since the Nov. 8 federal election and has shown no indication it plans to do anything.

"This apathy had better not extend into the general conduct of the government's affairs," he told a press conference here.

Mr. Douglas said the minority liberal government must be active, dynamic and aggressive if it wants the support of his 21 members of parliament.

"They asked for a majority because they wanted to do a lot of things."

"One would have expected they would have plans all ready ... but everyone is sitting around waiting for the Prime Minister to make up his mind about a simple thing like reorganizing the cabinet."

Mr. Douglas said the NDP will expect to see in the speech from the throne outlining this year's government program indications of action on medicare, higher old age pensions, a Canada Redevelopment Corporation, collective bargaining for civil servants, and manpower training.

"We don't think the Canadian people want an election. But we're warning the government that the fact that Canadians don't want an election should not be used as a refuge behind which to do nothing."

Tough Conditions

Eskimos Die Young

OTTAWA (CP)—A federal report says health conditions among the native people of the Canadian north "are still among the worst in the world."

Average lifespan of a native woman in the Northwest Territories was 21, against 63 for an outside Canadian. For a man in the Territories, it was 26. For another Canadian male, nearly 60.

The report contained a profile on health among the poor. It was distributed at a federal-provincial conference on poverty and opportunity here. It said Canadians in low income groups have more disabling illnesses and less health care than other groups. The children of the poor suffered particularly from ill health and died more often from illness.

But the problem was at its worst among Canadian Indians and Eskimos. Eskimo mortality rates were three times the national average.

Red Stance Rock Hard

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet view, the Soviet Union issued a new statement condemning U.S. action in Viet Nam. The statement ignored British appeals for a new Geneva peace conference on the Viet Nam issue and called on the 14 members of the 1954 Geneva conference, which partitioned Viet Nam, to condemn the Americans.

HITS HARD
In the interview Koyagin hit hard at the German question, reflecting bitter Soviet objection to any thought of West German participation in Atlantic Alliance nuclear forces. He said:

"In Europe, for example, the United States is trying to build up tensions, create an atmosphere conducive to war. You want to create the multilateral force, the Atlantic nuclear force... but these only result in uniting the forces of one camp. Any unification of forces in that camp must be directed against us."

HITS GERMAN POLICY
While the premier attacked U.S. presentation of the Viet Nam conflict, he indicated his main concern was Europe and U.S. policy toward West Germany. In this regard, he mentioned the decision to increase the Soviet military budget by five per cent.

Koyagin ranked Viet Nam with Germany as a primary source of aggravation of Soviet-U.S. relations. He maintained that a meeting of himself and President Johnson would "not be feasible" so long as the Viet Nam war continued.

He made these remarks in an interview with James Reston of the New York Times.

Some Police Aim to Miss

By HUBERT ERB

BERLIN (AP) — Year after year Germans have been shooting at the wall that cuts it in two.

The gun has been in deadly earnest ever since the East German Communists more than four years ago built the wall to stop a flow of refugees that was bleeding their Soviet-backed state of badly needed manpower.

The four-year toll at the 10-mile wall and along some 90 miles of fence separating West Berlin from East Germany stands at 54 officially confirmed deaths.

SHOOT TO SIDE

"We know the death toll to be at least three times that figure," Ernst Lemmer, former minister for refugee affairs, has said. Many more have been injured.

West Berlin police, however, say the East Germans do much more shooting to the side or in the air than shooting to kill.

Capt. Heinz Hackbarth, a police specialist for the West Berlin police, comments:

"If the East German border guards always aimed to kill or maim every time they see, hear or suspect a refugee, there would be a bloodbath far worse than we have had."

ABOUT 3,500 ESCAPED

Since August, 1961 when the wall was built, about 3,500 persons have managed to make it into West Berlin. Some have spectacular escape adventures, but most of the estimated six to 15 who daily attempt to come across take advantage as best they can of darkness, fog or what little natural cover the East Germans have left standing.

Many never make it past the 300-yard "death strip" the Communists have thrown around West Berlin.

MANY CAUGHT

West Berlin police list more than 2,000 persons known to have been arrested on the Communist side of the wall and 1,000 more captured along the East German zonal frontier. Those caught average a year in jail.

To stop escapes the East Germans have three Volkspolizei (People's Army) brigades around West Berlin. These total 14,000 men, with 3,600 always on guard.

They have 197 watch towers to aid them, plus spotlights, floodlights, flares and 211 dog stations. There are three companies of boat troops equipped with fast patrol craft.

According to West Berlin police, light machine-guns mounted in the towers are intended to cover lateral gaps between the towers. For close work near the boundary itself, foot patrols have shorter-range sub-machine-guns, tear gas grenades and anti-tank bazookas.

GUARDS ESCAPE

They are backed by motorcycle and truck patrols behind the "death strip." In some critical areas armored cars are brought up, especially at night.

Despite all Communist precautions, at least 435 uniformed guards have taken advantage of their posts near West Berlin to cross over.

DRAFTED

Capt. Hackbarth says the Communists try to make sure their men do not defect—and that they shoot when they are supposed to.

"At least 80 per cent of the guards are married or have other people in East Germany who depend on them," he said. "Most of them, usually drafted serving 18 months in the army, are not Berliners."

"They are always paired and whenever possible never in the same pairs two days in a row so they do not become friendly,

"Then there is fear of punishment and betrayal through a network of secret police agents within their ranks."

GUARDS KILLED

About 400 West Berlin police are posted along the border each day. They too are armed with sub-machine-guns and have tear gas grenades. The border patrols are drawn from an all-purpose West Berlin police force of 13,300 men.

There have been 13 occasions when West Berlin police opened fire to cover a refugee in danger of getting killed. One East German guard was killed in such an exchange and three others are known to have been killed by fire from their own comrades.

Dispute Goes to Arbitration

A salary dispute between Greater Victoria School Board and its 1,023 teachers goes before an arbitration board next Tuesday.

The three-man board, headed by Victoria insurance agent William McCall, will decide the teachers' 1966 pay scale.

TOP NEGOTIATORS

Teachers' nominee is Dr. I. D. Fal, associate professor of economics at the University of Victoria, while the school board has named lawyer Kenneth Murphy. Both have been associated with teachers' contract negotiations in the past years.

The teachers originally asked salary increases averaging 10 per cent. The board countered with an offer of between two and three per cent. Tuesday's meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the school board offices at Craigdarroch Castle.

A similar deadlock in Sooke school district will go to arbitration Dec. 29.

Chairman of the board is Vancouver lawyer Ernest A. Alexander.

EX-VICTORIAN

Nominee of the 140 Sooke district teachers is Dr. Walter Young, an ex-Victorian now a professor of economics and political science at UBC.

Kenneth Murphy has also been named by Sooke school board. He is a school board arbitration nominee in five other Island districts besides Victoria and Sooke.

Saanich teachers settled last month for a 5.7-per-cent salary boost.

Hoods Run Wild

Gangland Slayings Terrorize Boston

By JAMES CALOGERO

BOSTON (AP) — Hoodlums are playing so rough in Boston these days, says a homicide detective, that they go out and kill on their lunch hour and get back to work or hangout before the 1 p.m. whistle blows.

Greater Boston hoodlums have racked up 28 slayings and a dozen attempted murders in the last 20 months.

Not all the slayings were lunch-hour jobs but most were brazen, committed in the daytime and often before witnesses. Yet, there have been only two convictions and only five cases are pending in court.

Police complain they are receiving no co-operation from the public.

NO CO-OPERATION

Police Lt. Edward Sherry says "another half-dozen or so more such killings" are expected.

"Vengeance is a big factor in this thing and we're handicapped by the lack of public co-operation. The telephone doesn't ring and the mail doesn't bring even anonymous tips."

"Practically all these slayings involve punks gone wild. There's no big over-the-top sitting on a throne. Nobody's trying to grab power or jurisdiction over any organized racket."

A DEADLY FEUD

Sherry said 12 slayings resulted from a feud between a gang led by the three McLaughlin brothers of Charlestown and another headed by James (Buddy) McLean of Somerville. "And the feud apparently continues although McLean and two McLaughlins were killed and the third McLaughlin is under a death sentence for murder."

"We feel the other murders were the result of doublecrosses in such rackets as counterfeiting, narcotics and skylocking (money lending as usurious rates)."

Police Chief Thomas O'Brien said $2,500,000 is kicking around from the two biggest U.S. cash robberies—the Brink's robbery in Boston in 1950 and the unsolved Plymouth mail truck robbery of 1962.

He said it is possible one group is trying to extort money from the men who have it and a second group is eliminating the shakedown men.

Services Held For Air Victims

CANARY ISLANDS (UPI) — Funeral services were held here Wednesday for the 32 victims of the island's second major plane crash in seven months.

The crash occurred late Tuesday when a twin-engine DC-3 charter airliner plowed into a hillside during a rainstorm.

Seven months ago, 31 persons died when a Super-Constellation cracked in two and burst into flames at the local airport.

Garden Notes

Houseplants Parched

By M. V. CHESNUT

I don't suppose there is anything that provides such a homey and lived-in atmosphere to the home as a few well-chosen houseplants. From the humble geranium, potted in a jam tin and growing happily in a farmhouse window to the elaborate indoor brick planters of the modern ranch-style bungalow, houseplants are definitely here to stay.

I often hear old-timers reminiscing about the gloriously healthy growth and free flowering habit of the plants in their boyhood farm homes, and while their memories may be somewhat colored by the passage of time, I don't think there can be any doubt but that houseplants actually DID perform better in the old farm home than in our modern apartments and bungalows, and for a very good reason: they didn't have any central heating then.

Rooms were much cooler when buckets of coal and armfuls of logs had to be carried from the woodshed or coal bin. Or if a blazing hearth or a glowing pot-bellied stove created a cozy patch in the room, the heat didn't extend to the windowsill where the plants lived. The air in the kitchen was moist from the steam of cooking, and a kettle simmered constantly on the big old kitchen coal range.

This factor—the humidity of the air—is very important to the health and well-being of houseplants, and the lack of sufficient atmospheric moisture is a common cause of sickly, yellowing leaves and generally poor performance. When the preparation of dinner consists of opening a can of soup or popping a frozen dinner in the oven, even the kitchen air is often too dry for our plants.

I have noticed this particularly in my attempts to grow the Calla Lily Begonia, a plant sometimes nicknamed Youth and Old Age. This prima donna is a temperamental performer at best, but it thrived in the kitchen window of my grandmother's farm home, while I have never succeeded in keeping it alive for longer than a few weeks in the overheated, dry atmosphere of our living room.

It isn't easy to increase the humidity of the air around our plants. Sitting the pots on a big shallow tray filled with moistened pebbles helps some, but not very much.

The daily spraying of the leaves and buds with a fine mist of plain water is a big help, if you can do it in such a way as to avoid spotting the drapes and furniture, and I should point out here that even the fuzzy-leaved African violets, which resist solid drops of cold water on their foliage, will appreciate and thrive under a fine mist of lukewarm water.

An ordinary garden sprayer is much too big and too coarse for this indoor job. An old perfume atomizer is good, or a nasal spray, and there is a very good plastic gadget on the market called the Jet sprayer which holds about half a pint. It has a trigger action very similar to that of a child's water pistol, and it delivers a small, localized spray in the form of a very fine mist. The cost is just under $2.

The most practicable way to improve the environment of your houseplants is to move them into an unheated room, for the humidity rises as the temperature goes down. Your plants will be happier and healthier at 55 to 60 degrees than in the more than 70 to 72 degrees of heat, benefitting from both the cooler air and the increased humidity.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Double for Julie?

HOLLYWOOD (NANI)—It has never happened before, but people are saying that Julie Andrews will win the Emmy as well as the Oscar this year. The Emmy for her recent smash performance on NBC-TV, The Oscar for Sound of Music. Let's face it, they were the two best performances of 1965.

Kim Novak, back and all, will deposit herself and her husband, Richard Johnson, at the home of her parents in Chicago on Dec. 15 to stay over the holidays.

Brigitte Bardot came down with a bad case of sinusitis and bronchitis and is resting around the clock somewhere near Paris, so that she will be in good shape—no flippancy intended—when she flies into New York with her private army on the 16th.

Frank Sinatra Junior is working day and night in Manhattan—starring in his own show at Basin Street East, and by day in the Sammy Davis film, A Man Called Adam. Junior brought a group of 35 people with him for the night club show. That's a lot for one little feller.

"Don't let children use you, use them," says Tony Curtis who has his 15-month-old daughter, Alexandra, with him in London where he is completing "You Just Kill Me." "They love to be used," said Tony. "Children represent an extension of yourself. I find my children stimulating." Tony has two other daughters—from his marriage with Janet Leigh.

Shelley Winters, fighting the battle of the bulge at a New York health emporium, hopes to look svelte by the time she goes to England to make two pictures. The best place in which to lose weight is in your normal habitat, doing your normal chores. Otherwise, as soon as you leave the spa, back go the pounds. The shrinking woman's diet merely requires will power.

Fred MacMurray was paid $4,000 for one of his black Angus calves. He has 100 more just like it on his ranch. Fred is an actor who will never have to go to the Motion Picture Relief Fund for aid. . . . By the way, Elvis Presley has just increased his donation to the fund from one per cent of his earnings to two per cent. The wiggle one earns about $1,500,000 a year, to put it conservatively. . . . Chairman of the fund, Gregory Peck, has raised $2,000,000 towards the goal of $40,000,000.

Talking of rich movie stars, two among the top five are two you don't hear too much of these days—Brenda Scott and Jack Oakie. Scott hasn't made a picture for some time and doesn't ever have to. His money is in real estate and he's richer even than Fred MacMurray. Oakie, when he was in the chips, bought blue chip stocks when they were very cheap—and held on to them.

The only way for a star to get rich today is to own part of a television series. Hugh O'Brian is a Wyatt Earp millionaire. Lorne Green is on his second million from his Bonanza. Shirley Booth has collected $5,000 a week for every week of the years she has starred in Hazel, plus 25 per cent of the profits. And, said Carolyn Jones happily, "If my Addams Family series runs three more years, I'll never have to work again."

Robert Shaw's William The Conqueror cinema film epic for Warners, has a $9,000,000 budget. To get this plum, Robert had to sign for two more movies with the company. He isn't complaining. His fee for the trio—$1,000,000. He can use the money. At last count, he had six or was it seven children.

Vince Edwards, Ben Casey, has been threatening to quit his series for the past two years. After this season, the threat may be a fact. Looking over the recent Nielsen TV ratings, Vince was heard to say, "Our show may not be in the top 40, but at least it isn't in the bottom 15." One of his co-workers remarked afterwards, "I never thought I'd see the day when Vince would be happy because his show was not in the bottom 15." I think the doctors have had their day—on TV that is.

The greatest current shortage in Hollywood is young leading ladies. After Natalie Wood, Ann-Margaret and Tuesday Weld, who is there. I mean in the still-in-their-20s group. Sandy Dennis in her late 20s is a welcome addition to the sparse young ranks. If she makes good in Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf, and Any Wednesday, this good actress could have a whopping movie career. It took Sandy years to get here, but I think she is here to stay.

Everything comes to a girl who can wait, as I always tell myself. And as I told Julie Andrews when she covered up her disappointment at being overlooked for the My Fair Lady film version. Now I hear that Jack Warner wants to sign Julie for her original role in the studio's Camelot, with Richard Burton. Of course it will cost Jack a great deal more than if he had put Julie under contract when she was unknown as a movie actress.

Lana Turner, a girl who can wait, will finally get her honeymoon with Robert Eaton. They leave for Acapulco in 10 days and will spend three weeks at the plush villa owned by Ted Stauffer, and wasn't he married once to Betsy Larson?

1435 DOUGLAS BETWEEN JOHNSON AND PANDORA 383-7025

The bold look, the tall look and the long look are not the peculiar possession of dress, hat or automobile designers. The opinions of experts follow fashion trends of their own.

Pediatricians used to tell mothers of infants, to feed their babies "on demand." Nowadays, the pendulum has swung back to stricter, fixed feeding schedules.

Once psychologists spoke only of love as the single ingredient required in child-rearing. Now they dare use such words as "discipline," "responsibility," or "respect."

Not long ago educational psychologists were telling us that intelligence was native, hereditary and fixed. People, they suggested, inherit a certain degree of mental ability. And so they set about fashioning tests to measure that so-called inborn intelligence. Once tested you were given your IQ—supposedly, your number for life.

But fashions have changed. Day by day we are discovering that mentality can change and be changed. The IQ we were supposed to have when we were younger can turn out to be quite higher as we grow older. We have the innate ability to develop to a higher capacity.

In a word, brightness just doesn't happen. It must be brought to flower.

IQ tests, we now know, really measure only what has come to the surface. Clearly, there are many hidden intellectual abilities and mental capacities which we may possess but which lie deeply within us.

They can be drawn up to the surface, however, if we are properly guided, directed and nurtured itself, comes to its fullest flowering, when it is cultivated.

In the first instance, human intelligence can grow and develop if the social environment is stimulating. Put a bright child in a class of the not-so-bright, and lacking challenge and mental excitement, he will fail to develop to his fullest capacity.

His mind can move upward only if he is made to stand on tip-toes. The strain on his "mental muscles" helps to strengthen and to develop them.

Similarly, we do little for the average child if we expose him only to the ordinary—he never gets a chance to experience and delight in the extraordinary. He remains what he is because we've denied him the opportunity to become what he might be. If we protect and shelter him from excellence, he will forever reflect mediocrity.

The reason so many of our children do so poorly in English is probably due, in part, to the fact that most of them know only English—and no other language. If the only language we know is our own, we will not even know that well!

Instead of giving our children less to do, fewer opportunities to be challenged, or refusing to tax their minds and talents, we ought to be seeking ways to excite and to stimulate them.

As long as we keep paying so little attention to the average, our average will remain very low.

Professionals On Increase

OTTAWA (CP)—Professional ranks in Canada grew at a faster pace between 1951 and 1961 than any other major occupational category, a newly-published labor department survey shows.

In 1961 there were an estimated 634,000 persons working in the various professional occupations — engineers, lawyers, doctors, clergymen, nurses, musicians, journalists and teachers.

This was 64 per cent higher than the 388,000 listed in these occupations 10 years earlier.

TEACHERS

In the same period the number of manual workers rose only 12.7 per cent, clerical workers 45 per cent and sales personnel 41 per cent.

Biggest numerical gain among professionals was posted by school teachers—to 170,000 from 105,000. From a percentage standpoint the best increase was among professors and college principals—up 105 per cent to 10,000.

The number of physicians and surgeons increased by almost 50 per cent to 20,000. Graduate nurses were up 75 per cent to 62,000 and nurses-in-training 47 per cent to 22,000.

Despite their dominance in teaching and nursing, the role of women in professional ranks showed little change. They made up 43.2 per cent of professionals, just about the same as they did 60 years ago in 1901.

WRITERS

Journalists, including authors, numbered about 14,000 in 1961 for an increase of 81 per cent from 1951 figures. Clergymen were up 17 per cent to 18,000.

Among engineers, civil engineers expended at the best clip, showing an increase of 54 per cent to total 11,000. Mechanical engineers rose by 43 per cent to 13,000.

DECLINES

Lawyers jumped 34 per cent to 11,000. Musicians and music teachers had a 40-per-cent growth rate at 12,000.

Sharp employment declines occurred in primary industries during the 1951-61 survey period. Agriculture jobs dropped to 649,000 from 830,000, off almost 20 per cent. The number employed in fishing, hunting and trapping skidded to 37,000 from 53,000, lower by 30 per cent. Logging dropped by 21 per cent, to 80,000 from 101,000.

Riel Rebellion Survivor Dies

Mrs. Blanche Askey, 80, believed to be the last survivor of the 1885 Louis Riel Rebellion on the Prairies, died in Victoria Saturday.

Mrs. Askey was 10 when she was captured along with her family by the Cree tribe.

The 32 prisoners were kept 2½ months by the Indians, and were tramped through heavy bush and swamp.

When starvation set in, the Indians realized the hopelessness of the situation and released the prisoners.

Mrs. Askey spoke the Cree language and was a telegrapher at the various agencies where her father was agent.

She was born in Bowmanville, Ont., and came to Victoria 40 years ago.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at McCall Brothers.

Mrs. Peggy Nash and Miss Betty West, both of Victoria.

Big Choice Faces Esquimalt Saturday

The 4,115 voters in Esquimalt will have a decision to make Saturday among three candidates for Reeve and five candidates — two of them incumbents — for three council seats. Owner-electors will also vote on hospitals, regional parks and the school building bylaw. A questionnaire answered for the Association of Women Electors brought out each candidate's views on municipal problems.

Reeveship candidate George Argyle favors a better deal with the provincial government on hospitals, professional guidance in the schools, and more scholarships rather than larger ones. Reeveship candidate Ray Bryant feels capital costs of hospitals should come through the social services tax; concurs with the present system of meeting school costs; believes there should be new juvenile court facilities; believes grants to the Art Gallery and the Victoria School of Music should be emphasized rather than aid to individual students.

Reeveship candidate D. H. Nelson feels hospital costs must be met, but would like an investigation into the allocation of the five per cent sales tax and that the percentage the property-owner pays on schools should be controlled or at least discussed at the municipal level.

Incumbent Coun. Gerald Horne believes a thorough discussion of provincial-municipal shares in hospitals is necessary before any commitments are made. He said the present school financing system is fair and felt there should be improved facilities for the family and juvenile courts.

Incumbent Coun. Arthur Mebs believes people should assume greater financial responsibility for hospitals and urges revising operating and other school grant schedules to restore an equitable cost-sharing basis. He favors providing councillors in the school system.

Candidate Russell Atkinson believes hospitals should be Banced with a social service tax on luxury items or an increase in the provincial portion of the income tax, and the same method should be used for school financing.

Candidate Roy Elphick said hospital costs should be shared by all residents of the province; that there is no practical alternative to present school financing and believes grants should be given to certain fine arts groups.

Former councillor Arthur Fields feels increasing the B.C. sales tax to pay for hospitals would be more equitable to all. He favors greater fund participation by the federal government in building schools before they are needed, not after.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Most people pass about three pints of liquid a day or about three pounds of liquid waste. Now, if kidneys become sluggish, urinary irritation and bladder discomfort may follow. The result can be backache and restless nights. This is when Dadd's Kidney Pills can help bring relief. Dadd's stimulates kidney action, helps relieve the irritated condition that causes the backache. Take Dadd's and see if you don't feel better, rest better. Total success fully by millions for over 18 years. Now large size seven boxes. Ask.

Former Clerk Backs Mooney

Frank Hunter and Rev. Clifford Waite have come out in favor of Ald. Millard Mooney in his bid for the mayor's office in Saturday's civic elections.

Mr. Hunter, who recently retired after many years as city clerk, said he would have yielded to pressure to run for mayor himself if Ald. Mooney were not running.

"In view of recent press pronouncements on behalf of another candidate, I feel impelled now to publicly indicate my stand on Ald. Mooney's behalf," he said.

Retiring Mayor R. B. Wilson recently made a public endorsement of Ald. Alf Toome as his successor.

Mr. Waite said Ald. Mooney warranted election not only because he was senior alderman, but because he had carried the heaviest load of committee work and was the "most knowledgeable" of the three candidates.

Mr. Hunter said the voters had promoted Ald. Mooney to the senior aldermanic post through seven elections and "in that situation he, before anyone else, is entitled to consider he has a clear mandate from the people to run for mayor."

Mr. Hunter was Victoria Social Credit candidate and Mr. Waite was Victoria Progressive Conservative candidate in the recent federal election.

VOTE! YES FOR HOSPITALS

To a large extent, the economy of a community depends upon the physical health of the individuals in that community. Don't let Greater Victoria suffer from inadequate hospital facilities.

Property taxation is equal taxation, because those who rent homes and apartments are also paying a share of the taxes in their rent. This is the only fair way to raise the necessary community contribution toward hospital construction.

Voting "Yes" for hospitals simply means that you agree that the community's share of hospital construction should be spread equally among all citizens through property taxation.

Vancouver Man Charged With Abduction of Girl

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police Wednesday laid three charges under the abduction section of the Criminal Code against 58-year-old Donald McKay in connection with the 24-hour disappearance of Lori Taylor, 8, a cerebral palsy and epilepsy victim who must take medicine three times a day.

Judge Says Minister Called Them Menace Vote by Jailed Tories Protested

OTTAWA (CP)—The question of alleged irregularities by Forestry Minister Sauve in the Nov. 8 federal election boiled up suddenly Wednesday at a press conference being given by Acting Prime Minister Martin. Judge Joseph Duguay of Grindstone, Que., has told reporters that Mr. Sauve telephoned him on election day to protest the release of two men from jail to vote. They had been charged that day with threatening a Liberal. Mr. Martin was asked whether Mr. Sauve had telephoned the judge in his riding, Iles-de-la-Madeleine, to have two Conservatives detained in jail. Mr. Martin said he had heard about the matter but hadn't read the newspaper account in question.

Judge Duguay, who had allowed the men out—under police escort—to vote, has said that he received "at least two, possibly three" calls from Mr. Sauve protesting that the men should not be released to vote on the grounds that there would be trouble. "He told me they would be a menace," Southam New Services quotes Judge Duguay as saying.

Legal Ways

Mr. Martin added that there is a well-established legal procedure for anyone to take if he contends irregularities occurred during the election. He was then asked what would happen if the persons making the allegations had enough money to take the matter to court.

Mr. Martin said—jokingly—he didn't want to be asked more embarrassing questions. Later, a reporter asked if the government planned to start an investigation. "I know nothing about the situation," Mr. Martin replied.

Another reporter said there had been criticism in the Rivard affair that the government hadn't started its own investigation and that the Opposition had had to disclose it.

Clean House

He asked whether it was still the government's view that the "other side" should "clean house" and not the government itself.

Mr. Martin said the question involves an allegation against a member of Parliament. There were well-known legal remedies to deal with the matter. He added that he wouldn't want to leave the impression that the matter wasn't being looked at by the government.

"Is it?" he was asked. Mr. Martin said he had made only an "observation." Mr. Sauve now is in Rome attending a United Nations Food and Agriculture Conference.

On election day, fishermen Willie Lebel and Lucien Bourgeois were arrested as the result of a campaign fracas the previous night. They were allowed out of prison to vote, then returned to their cells.

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain is working toward getting an international force to guard the power station on the Rhodesian side of the Kariba Dam, the authoritative Financial Times says.

The newspaper's foreign editor, writing in an early edition today, says a force composed mainly of British and other "white Commonwealth" troops, perhaps under United Nations auspices, is envisaged.

Zambia urgently appealed to Britain Wednesday for swift military action to neutralize the area around the Kariba Dam.

It is hoped that the British plan will satisfy President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and be acceptable to the breakaway Rhodesian leader, Ian Smith, the newspaper says.

Both will be sounded out by Sir Robert Menzies, the Australian prime minister, "as the Commonwealth statesman least objectionable to the Salisbury regime."

The newspaper says Whitehall circles argue that as Smith now has repudiated Rhodesia's obligation on the £23,600,000 ($70,800,000) World Bank loan for the Kariba project, the United Nations, of which the bank is an agency, is entitled to foreclose.

The UN would accomplish this by putting in troops to guard the Kariba installations, The Financial Times says.

"It is recognized, however, that blue berets (caps worn by soldiers in UN forces) are a red rag to a bull in Rhodesia," The Financial Times says. "So the force would be composed of white troops from Britain and the Commonwealth."

"It would thus provide a reassurance to Mr. Smith that there was no possibility of President Kaunda bringing in African troops, and thus provoking a racial clash across the Zambezi, which could result in the blowing up of the dam."

U.S. Hits Soviet 'Distortion'

New Viet Peace Push

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain is making a new effort to get early peace talks on Viet Nam started, informed sources said Wednesday.

The British government sent

Russia a draft message on the subject, the sources said.

They said Britain wants the message to be circulated by them jointly to the powers who attended the 1954 Geneva conference on Viet Nam. The source declined to disclose the contents of the draft.

Britain and Russia were co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina and Britain supports announced U.S. readiness for unconditional Viet Nam peace negotiations.

Britain has several times proposed to Russia a joint initiative to get Viet Nam peace talks going, but the Soviet government has replied by saying this is a matter for the North Vietnamese.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has deplored as "disappointing" what it called "the extreme distortion" of views expressed by Soviet Premier Kossygin on current world events. (See Page 41.)

A state department press officer also said Wednesday that much of Kossygin's criticism of U.S. policy in Viet Nam and of U.S. efforts to set up a NATO nuclear force including West Germany was essentially old stuff.

Warning System Fails

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson was told Wednesday night at Fort Hardy, B.C., knocked out an alternate alarm warning system for 14 minutes. The primary continental warning system was not affected.

The report came from Stewart Johnson, chief engineer of the Federal Power Commission, and Boyd Austin, chief of the commission's San Francisco office.

For about 50 minutes there was a loss of power at Fort Hardy to a microwave station, part of a network set up to warn of the approach of unidentified hostile planes. But the report said other channels were made available within 14 minutes for the alternate system.

Vietnamese Troops In Big Clash

SAIGON (CP)—Massed battalions of South Vietnamese government troops clashed with an estimated 2,000 Viet Cong guerrillas today in a pre-dawn battle about 335 miles north-east of here.

By mid-morning intense fighting was continuing, a U.S. military spokesman said.

No reports were available on casualties but it was thought here that they were heavy among the government forces.

Two Islanders Badly Hurt

U.S. Sergeant Dies in Crash

COURTENAY—A United States Air Force staff sergeant, James E. Funkhouser of Ohio, was killed instantly when his sports car was involved in a head-on collision with another car Wednesday.

He was stationed at RCAF Station Comox.

Two persons were injured in the crash. Carol Ann Manson of Courtenay, a passenger in the serviceman's car, was critically injured. She is in hospital at Comox.

The other driver involved was Ken Day, operator of a music store in Courtenay, who was seriously injured. The sports car was driving south on the Island highway in heavy rain when it met Day's car head-on. The accident occurred at 3 p.m.

Children Will Share $10,000 Settlement

VANCOUVER (CP)—The two children of Mrs. Doris LeCorre of 1170 Palmer, Victoria, will receive $10,000 in an out-of-court settlement for the loss of their father in a 1964 target shooting accident.

The settlement, approved by Supreme Court Wednesday, followed a suit launched by Mrs. LeCorre against Gerrit Mol of Saanich, charging that her husband, Jean James Peakman, was killed by a bullet from a rifle fired by Mr. Mol near Leechtown Nov. 15, 1964.

Roland Johnson, counsel for Mrs. LeCorre, said Mr. Peakman was hunting with Mr. Mol and stopped to fire at a tin can. While returning to their firing position, Mr. Mol's rifle accidentally fired and the bullet struck Mr. Peakman in the spine.

He was dead on arrival at Duncan hospital.

500,000 Face Deportation

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith warned Wednesday that 500,000 foreign workers in Rhodesia will be sent home to Zambia and Malawi to make room for Rhodesians who lose jobs because of British economic sanctions against the breakaway, white-ruled colony.

The warning came in a broadcast in which Smith bitterly attacked British Prime Minister Wilson, whom he accused of having "flooded" Rhodesia's bank reserves.

"As Mr. Wilson has flooded our bank reserves, I am sure he will be happy to accept the responsibility and meet our international financial obligations," he said.

Second Thoughts

Africans Cool To Big Break

By Reuters

Some independent African countries appeared to be having second thoughts Wednesday about a joint weekend decision to break off diplomatic relations with Britain if Ian Smith's Rhodesian regime is not crushed by Dec. 15.

They were also taking a deeper look at their second major decision: The formation of an all-African military force to smash the white regime in Rhodesia.

But in French-speaking Africa, President Maurice Yaméogo of Upper Volta said Wednesday the Organization of African Unity conference had no authority to make a decision on such an important matter as Rhodesia.

In Tunisia, pro-government newspapers said the Addis Ababa conference went too far in its ultimatum to London. President William Tubman of Liberia said Britain should be given time to handle the Rhodesian crisis, "since Rhodesia is still a British colony."

Reliable informants in Lusaka said Wednesday the Zambian president, Kenneth Kaunda, is warning other African leaders about the difficulties involved in a diplomatic rupture with Britain.

Bells Peal Historic Farewell

Vatican Council Ends with Send-Off by 200,000

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—"Goodbye, Goodbye," a group of waving nuns shouted over the pealing bells of the basilica as the council of bishops hurried out of St. Peter's Square Wednesday.

Minutes earlier Pope Paul VI had solemnly dismissed the ecumenical council fathers with the Latin words "Ite in Pace"—Go in Peace.

Pope Paul, a slight figure in a white mitre to the throng standing in the square, sat on a crimson throne in front of the basilica.

On either side of him were the more than 2,000 white-robed council fathers, formally attired official delegations from many nations, and distinguished visitors.

Large as the gathering was, it was almost dwarfed by the massive facade of St. Peter's and the statues shrouded against the sky that ring the balustrade and the roof of the basilica.

In the vestment of St. Peter's Square white-coated nuns and camera-carrying tourists vied for a better view of the ceremony. Today's feast of the Immaculate Conception is a public holiday and Romans dressed in their Sunday best predominated in the crowd.

Pope Paul entered the square for the ceremony in his gestatorial chair, carried aloft on the shoulders of the

From London

A discovery of first importance for understanding the harmful effects of atomic radiation has been made by scientists at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

The discovery, reported in the magazine Nature, shows that there may be unsuspected hazards in using such radiation to sterilize foodstuffs.

The scientists, Dr. R. M. Holsten, Dr. M. Sughill and Professor F. C. Steward, have found that when sugar is exposed to radiation, chemical substances are produced which interfere with the growth and development of living cells, and may promote genetic mutations.

What these substances are is still unknown — but a great many foodstuffs contain sugar.

This opens up a whole new line of research into the effects of radiation. Until now, such work has concentrated on the direct effects of radiation on the cell, particularly the damage to the chromosomes which carry the genetic information.

The discovery of the effects on sugar shows that there may be a whole realm of indirect effects.

Effect Widespread

Viet Nam War Spreads Poison

By ARCH MacKENZIE, from Washington

The latest Soviet acts appear to confirm the paralysis which the war in Viet Nam has caused in East-West relations.

The impact of the growing war also has cast a shadow over Western relations.

Russia has announced a five-per-cent increase in defence spending and taken a harder line toward the U.S. on the specific questions of Viet Nam and West Germany.

These are being interpreted as Soviet realization that it can do nothing to end the war now, without drawing more criticism from China.

The evidence from the battlefield and elsewhere shows North Vietnamese determination to fight on for a long time and that it intends to match its own way the steady increase of American military might in South Viet Nam, drawing from its own manpower resources and using Soviet and Chinese aid.

Thus, the long war which had been taking shape all year has become a fact, diplomats say gloomily, with no hope anywhere that anybody can do anything about it.

Militarily, it means that U.S. forces will continue to swell. The present level of around 170,000 will grow perhaps as high as 350,000 or even 400,000 men, reliable quarters predict.

Pressure will increase on President Johnson as the 1966 congressional elections next November draw closer for more bombing in the north and perhaps even in Laos and Cambodia to cut North Vietnamese supplies of troops and men and thereby save the lives of American troops.

There is growing apprehension as well that the American role in another major Asian land war—perhaps bigger than Korea—

revives substantially the hazard of another direct Chinese intervention.

The question is how much its leaders will take, or whether they will remain content to urge on North Viet Nam and show extreme caution themselves.

At least as important, say observers, is the impasse to which the war in Viet Nam has led prospects of better relations with the Communist world.

The key is an agreement to curb or ban nuclear spread which Russia's latest mood now makes more dubious than ever. But time is limited, say observers, and the next logical U.S.-Soviet steps in the absence of any nuclear agreement are costly programs to find the nuclear means to ward off nuclear attack by missiles.

Once such programs are begun or completed, another major step in nuclear escalation has been taken and nuclear disarmament is that much more difficult, it is argued.

The poison of Viet Nam has seeped elsewhere too — into hopes of relaxing trade with the European Communist bloc, into relations with other Eastern countries and even into the Atlantic Alliance where it has created friction among Washington, Paris and London.

It affects the nuclear role to be given to West Germany within NATO. As the Soviet line hardens, West German arguments could gain strength toward obtaining a larger share in the making of decisions despite considerable reluctance among the Western allies.

Moral Victory

Mitterand Vote Comforts Reds

By ALAIN de LYROT, from Paris

French leftists, especially the Communist Party, were the principal victors in the French elections which humiliated President Charles de Gaulle.

Leftist candidate Francois Mitterand, who received the massive support of the French Reds, came in second to De Gaulle with 32 per cent of the vote—far ahead of centre candidate Jean Lecanuet.

De Gaulle received 43.9 per cent of the vote.

For the first time since the 1958 "Popular Front" (the union of all leftist parties including the Communists), the French left managed to keep its unity and to prove its massive power in France's political life.

It can be safely assumed that about one-fifth of Mitterand's 32 per cent vote came directly from the powerful French Communist Party. Until now the Communists had managed to retain about that percentage of the vote but had been isolated and kept at arm's length by other leftist parties such as the Socialist Party.

Mitterand officially accepted the Reds' support. Although not a Communist himself, it makes him partly the political prisoner of that party.

France's anti-Communists, therefore, will have little choice in the Dec. 19 runoff. They will have to vote for De Gaulle to avoid a Communist victory even though some of them strongly disapprove of his negative policies toward the Atlantic Alliance and the European Common Market.

This should insure De Gaulle's re-election although it is expected that many anti-Communists might vote for Mitterand on the assumption that he will not be elected anyway.

The result may be that De Gaulle's majority in the runoff will be relatively small and the Mitterand vote stronger than expected.

The setback suffered by De Gaulle was believed to have three major causes:

● His arrogant disdain for the French electorate which led him to assume that he could be re-elected without taking an active and serious part in the campaign except for two short radio and television appearances.

● A normal drop of popularity after seven years of absolute power during which his backing declined from 80 per cent in the 1958 referendum to 61 per cent in the 1962 referendum.

● More than 30 per cent of the French voters are less than 35 years old and many of them are believed to have voted for the younger men who ran against De Gaulle.

● The anger and worry of a substantial number of voters who saw De Gaulle as a threat to the Atlantic Alliance, Franco-American co-operation and European unity.

● De Gaulle's age. At 75, it was felt that De Gaulle should not have aspired to another seven-year term.

● The talent, eloquence and good looks of his two leading contenders who staged a lively and intelligent campaign.

The conclusion of the first ballot of the French presidential elections is that even if De Gaulle is elected in the runoff Dec. 19, he will be forced to drop his intransigence and take the opposition into consideration. A more human and flexible president may, or at any rate should, emerge.

Law Declared Unconstitutional

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A three-judge federal court declared unconstitutional Wednesday a New York state law requiring that a voter must have at least a sixth-grade education in an English-language school.

The decision affected approximately 500,000 Spanish-educated Puerto Ricans.

Judge Irving R. Kaufman of U.S. District Court, who wrote the unanimous decision, said the New York law was superseded by the 1963 federal voting rights act.

Discovery Lacks Purpose

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (Reuters)—Two American scientists who hacked their way through a "mathematical jungle" to win the Nobel physics prize said Wednesday they could see no practical application for their work.

Prof. Julian S. Schwinger, 47, of Harvard University, told reporters he was awarded the prize because "I tried to hack my way through the mathematical jungle and arrive at a definite numerical value for the magnetic moment of the electron."

His colleague, Prof. Richard P. Feynman, also 47, said:

"I can see no practical applications from the discoveries."

Painting Sold For $60,000

LONDON (Reuters)—A small painting by the 17th century painter Claude, which brought $50 ($150) in a sale in 1942, was sold Wednesday for $20,000 ($60,000) at Sotheby's, the London auctioneers.

Minister Points Finger

SELMA (UPI)—An attorney for three white men charged with the murder of civil rights worker Rev. James Reeb of Boston attempted to prove Wednesday that the minister may have died because his friends did not give him first aid.

Reeb and two fellow Unitarian ministers were attacked last March 9 as they left a Negro restaurant where they had dinner. The three white ministers, all from out of state, were in Selma to help with a civil rights drive.

Those charged with the attack are Namon O'Neal Hoggie, a 30-year-old mechanic, his brother William Stanley Hoggie, a 36-year-old salesman, and Elmer Cook, 41, a novelty firm manager.

The state introduced depositions from Birmingham physicians who stated that a massive head injury suffered by Reeb in the attack was the basic cause of his death.

Rev. Orloff Miller of Boston, one of Reeb's companions on the night of the attack, took the stand in the courtroom of circuit judge L. S. Moore Wednesday and identified Cook as the "lead man" in the club-swinging assault.

Although identifying Cook as the "lead man" in the attack, Miller, like Olson, was unable to say for certain that the other defendants were among the "four or five" whites who assaulted the three.

Pilcher asked Miller if it was not true that he had dropped to the sidewalk as the attack began. Miller said that was so and agreed to demonstrate for the jury.

Leaving the witness stand.

Miller stood in front of the jury their seats to get a better view, hox and dropped to his knees. Pilcher asked Miller: "What can you see from that back of his neck and brought position?" he replied. The minister then floor. Members of the all-white jury added: "I had a good look at the some of the 200 spectators left gentleman I have identified."

Dear Victoria Voters:

It has been my good fortune to serve as Alderman in one of the most exciting periods of the City's history. Under the leadership of Mayor R. B. Wilson we have made advances, during this time, which would have seemed almost unbelievable a few short years ago. For most of this time it has been my privilege to be closely associated with many of these developments. As Chairman of the Committees dealing with City Beautification, Downtown Improvement and Urban Renewal, I have dedicated many hundreds of hours to the resolve to make our City the finest capital in Canada. Above all, I have derived the keenest pleasure from my Chairmanship of the Centennial Square Committee which has resulted in a civic complex acclaimed across Canada. I believe that planning, both regional and local, is the key to our ability to assure for our Capital City and its residents an ever more prosperous future. We here are endowed with the most beautiful natural environment that has ever been bestowed upon a city. Such a heritage demands from those in positions of responsibility the utmost of their wisdom and forethought as to how such riches are administered.

Now after much thought, and consultation with those whose opinions I respect, I am standing for election as Mayor of Victoria. It is my belief that the Office of Mayor is a full-time responsibility, demanding from the holder of this office his complete and undivided allegiance. It is my intention, if elected, to resign from my present position and to work full time as your Mayor.

I am grateful of the opportunity that you have given me for the last five years to serve you as one of your Aldermen. The trust you have placed in me has, I believe, been justified and now I earnestly ask for your support again so that I may continue to serve you, this time as Mayor.

Yours sincerely,

Worm Food Provides Art Form

By RUTH McKELLAR

COURTENAY — The art of making something artistic out of bits of worm-eaten beach wood is the demanding hobby of Karl and Ruby Linstrom.

It's called teredocraft, from the name of the teredocidae, a mollusk that eats holes in the wood.

Main object is to use the wood in artistic fashioning of lamp bases.

And the hobby has been very successful. Many of the Linstrom's products have been shown in exhibitions.

The hobby started on a tip by a tourist who stayed at the Linstrom's tourist cabins in 1963.

She picked up a piece of log on the beach, and demonstrated the possibilities for art work from the object.

The log must be in the correct state of decomposition to be adequate.

When a log is found, the correct length is cut off. The wood is washed in water twice daily for several days, then dried slowly. When it is ready for use, Mr. Linstrom uses an axe, rip saw and cross-cut saw.

The lamp shades are sanded to an eighth of an inch thick, and are ready for linseed oil finish.

Putting the four sides of the lamp shade together is difficult. He makes a wire to go around the top and works the sides from there.

These shades create a soft, diffused light shining through the many tiny holes in the wood.

The smaller pieces left over from the lampshade work go to Ruby, who uses them to make wall plaques, combining the wood with another hobby, ceramics.

The lamps have been displayed at the Comox Valley arts and crafts show, a 10-day showing in Vancouver, and the Linstroms have been invited to put their work in the PNE.

Mayo Expansion

Nanaimo
To Get New Plant

By PETER TAYLOR

NANAIMO—Mayo Lumber will build a new packaging plant near the assembly wharf, Dr. Henry MacHemer of Chemainus announced Wednesday.

Dr. MacHemer, an official of the company, said construction could start within two months. He added the company is also carrying out an engineering study into the construction of a re-manufacturing plant at the same site.

Dr. MacHemer could not give a cost estimate at this time. The re-manufacturing plant will process previously-cut lumber into different dimensions, which will then be packaged in different lengths.

A contract for grading and graveling has already been let to Hub City Paving and Construction for $34,883.

Harbor Commissioner John Dunham said part of this new 12-acre site is now under negotiation with a local mill for leasing.

Dr. MacHemer confirmed, these negotiations are taking place.

Mr. Dunham said the new development could add 30,000,000 board feet of lumber exported through Nanaimo in the course of the year.

Mayo Lumber's present sawmill is at the end of Haliburton Street, south of the city. The company's new plant would not only handle products from the mill but supplies could come from other sources as well.

A Shattering Finale!

Safe driving week came to a shattering close in Nanaimo when a transport truck rammed a hydro pole at the intersection of Terminal and St. George. Driver Thomas Curry, Lantzville, was taken to hospital with head injuries. Here, unidentified repairman inspects the impact point.—(Agnes Flett)

Menial Jobs Below Dignity?

Shape Up, or Ship Out, Gals

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN—Young women who won't do work they believe is beneath them, yet are too lazy to make themselves acceptable for better jobs, are a constant unemployed statistic in the Cowichan Valley. The National Employment Service finds it almost impossible to get employment for these girls, who haven't the motivation to upgrade themselves, but hold out for good jobs. Said NES manager R. S.

Robinson: "A large surplus of women exists in the service occupations, sales and clerical. Most of these women, mainly young, have not the experience, qualifications or personal suitability demanded by employers."

He said many have not attained a Grade 10 education, and "have not the necessary motivation to upgrade themselves."

Mr. Robinson said, "Many refuse to accept referrals as waitresses or kitchen helpers because they feel this work is beneath their dignity."

"Many mothers support their daughters in this stand."

Mr. Robinson said "The general high level of employment which has prevailed for the past two years continues without letup."

"Barren layoffs in the logging industry due to snowfall during the next three months, this high level of employment is expected to continue without interruption during 1966."

BUILDING HEAVY
The construction industry is very busy with tenders to be called within the next six weeks for the new five-storey provincial government office and completion of the second phase of the courthouse.

B.C. Hydro building at Stratford's Crossing, construction of the buildings to house the second newspaper machine at the Crofton B.C. Forest Products plant and large scale school construction lie ahead.

Province Protects Petroglyphs

NANAIMO—Erosion and vandals are causing so much damage to the rock carvings in Petroglyph Park south of here that the provincial parks branch has stepped in to preserve the old Indian carvings.

A parks branch maintenance crew is now building a shelter to protect the petroglyphs from the weather, and a chain link fence to keep vandals from scratching the carvings.

An interpretation board at the site will also be enlarged so that visitors to the site "will know the history (of the mysterious carvings) as far as we can determine," said a parks branch official.

Two Arrested
At Courtenay

COURTENAY—Investigation into a wave of vandalism in the Comox Valley has resulted in the arrest of a man and a juvenile.

The man, Ernest Wyatt, recently employed at the airbase, and the juvenile will be charged with wilful damage.

Basketball Program

Island Playoffs Set

CUMBERLAND—Officials have set schedules of basketball play for all ages.

Courtenay Recreation Association has been given the Bantam Girls' Island playoffs with the boys' tournament to take place in Victoria.

Victoria also will hold the Island-B.C. pre-midlet boys' and girls' tournament.

Juvenile and junior divisions will play home-and-home total point series north vs. south for the Island title.

A bid for the Island B.C. midlet finals put in by Cumberland was bypassed in favor of the Victoria team which has successfully held the tourney for the division in the past.

A new entry in the Island basketball picture, that of Powell River, will hold the Senior B men's tournament.

Dates for all tournaments leading to Island finals will be announced to fit into the schedule for B.C. finals.

Island registrar Mrs. Ruth McKellar reported registration down slightly, but since the meeting forms sent out bring the total well up to last year's mark.

Mrs. McKellar, as secretary-treasurer of the Vancouver Island Referees Association, gave a brief report on the activities of that group, noting clinics being held throughout the Island and B.C. areas.

But 'Get Tough' Policy Goes Soft

Pollution Scored

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI—If the city "got tough" with the MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River mill over air pollution, the mill might either close down or move outside city limits, according to Mayor Les Hammer.

He was referring to statements made by MLA John Squire (NDP), who said municipalities now have legislation to force companies to control air pollution.

Mayor Hammer said: "If our council has not been successful in suppressing air pollution, it is not for lack of trying."

"We are perfectly aware of the municipal act provisions," Mr. Squire said the city used the provisions when it demanded the Tahsis mill, formerly located here, to improve its air pollution control.

Mayor Hammer replied: "We did get the Tahsis company to make repairs."

MAYOR UNDER FIRE
"And we have been blamed for chasing Tahsis Company out of town. Actually this had nothing to do with it, but I have been under fire from citizens as a result."

The mayor said in theory it is possible for the city to make things so tough a company would either close down or take the simple course of relocating outside the municipality where there is no pollution control.

'LITTLE HOPE'
"Until there is provincial legislation to cover all areas, there is little hope of enforcing local tough bylaws," Mayor Hammer said.

He said: "We have been told one reason Powell River got the recent $90,000,000 expansion of Mac-Powell was because they said 'bring your expansion and we won't worry about the smoke and smog.'"

He said unless pollution is provincially controlled, there are dozens of communities that

Mayor
Asks
Unity

PORT ALBERNI—Mayor Les Hammer says successful candidates in the civic election have a lot of hard work ahead of them.

He said "We need the best elected officials available. We need men fully in favor of amalgamation, who can work now to avoid or solve the problems of tomorrow, thus smoothing the way for the joining of the two cities."

The mayor who was returned to office by acclamation pointed out that men of vision and long-range planning ability as well as a co-operative attitude are required to create a good combined city council. The new council will also be called on to help complete formation of a regional district here, the mayor said.

He added "I hope the 1966 Port Alberni council will not be divided by minorities but may work together using its full energy for promotion of all phases of civic betterment, progress and inter-municipal co-operation. With far-sighted, dedicated aldermen, 1966 will see formation of a hospital district, an ambulance district, a regional planning board, a suitable centennial project, a senior citizens activity centre, increase civic works and buildings, parks, playgrounds and recreation."

Project Awaits
Ballot

PORT ALBERNI—No decisions have been made as yet on the centennial project for the Alberni Valley and none will be pending the election of new city councils in the Twin Cities. It was announced at the recent monthly meeting of the centennial committee.

The projects subcommittee did, however, report on a special meeting held with representatives of the community, the arts and crafts groups in particular, to hear their many suggestions for projects.

It was emphasized by the committee that no press release on this meeting had been issued by any committee member. Some furor was aroused last week by a report which implied that the committee was dropping both the pool and the senior citizens centre as possible projects.

Cowichan Teachers
Will Get Pay Boost

DUNCAN—Cowichan school board salary committee has signed a 1966 salary agreement which will give the district's 200 teachers a 5.94 per cent increase on the basic scale and the 1965 payroll of $1,192,856 will be boosted by between 5.94 and 6 per cent.

Kindergarten
Vote
Defended

NANAIMO—"Slow learners are getting sufficient attention, especially in comparison with the help really bright children are getting," school trustee Dr. Roy MacMillan said Wednesday.

Saturday ratepayers in Nanaimo School District will face two votes, a $3,000,000 elementary and high school building program, and a smaller $300,000 kindergarten referendum.

PROGRAM BLASTED
The kindergarten program is coming under fire from a small group of mothers because they feel the money could be spent in a better way on more help for slow learners and improved playground equipment.

At the present time the board runs six experimental kindergarten classes in different schools throughout the district. If the kindergarten referendum is defeated Dr. MacMillan believes there is a good possibility the program will be scrapped entirely.

Dr. MacMillan said the board is already spending a considerable sum on slow learners, as well as a remedial reading program.

The reading program is not necessarily made up from slow learners, but it does contain some.

"If anything, we need more emphasis on the really bright," Dr. MacMillan said.

NON-SHARABLE
He pointed out much of the money that could be spent on playgrounds would be non-sharable with the provincial government.

Defending the kindergarten referendum, he said "five-year-old children are certainly ready for something. We're not the only district which has gone into a kindergarten program."

"We have put kindergarten into a special referendum for the ratepayers to choose."

Ferry Crews Angry
Over Shifts
For Hourly Sailings

While most people welcomed the news that B.C.'s ferries will make hourly weekend sailings during the winter, some crew members have been reported to be angry about their new shifts.

"The new schedule means we will be working practically all weekends and holidays, which is going back to the dark ages as far as working conditions are concerned," one disgruntled ferry employee said Wednesday.

Monty Aldous, general manager of B.C. Ferries, answered that "Naturally people are going to have to work weekends—we operate on weekends."

He said he had received no official complaint from ferry employees about the new winter schedule, which will double the number of weekend sailings between Vancouver Island and the B.C. mainland starting Jan. 1.

Mr. Aldous said the shift schedule had to be changed to provide the increased service, that one more year-round crew had been added and that employees were not being asked to work more days in a year than they were required to earlier.

Model Mill Gets Critical Look

Helen Jurinec, B.C. Tel communications centre; P. E. Bowle Evans, project manager in charge of mill's construction; and Margaret Dawson, secretary to registrar of the engineers' association.

When Nanaimo pulled (or was forced) out of the Inter-City Lacrosse League at the start of last season, Ed Bourke issued a warning to Victoria Shamrocks.

"The mainland teams don't want us," he said. "And when they get another team over there they won't want you. So let's get smart, form a Vancouver Island League, and to hell with them."

Shamrocks declined with thanks. They went their own way—and it was the right move—plummeted, from second place to last, enjoyed one of their worst seasons ever at the gate, and came out of it almost dead broke. Today it's a moot point whether they'll last another season.

Meanwhile, strange things were happening in Nanaimo. Most of the top Nanaimo players were taken by the Shamrocks. ("They stripped us," Bourke says a trifle bitterly.) But there were some left, and Nanaimo went ahead with its dream of an eventual Island league.

A team was put in Alberni. At one point it folded briefly, and at the end it featured 16 players from Nanaimo and two from Alberni. They got there by car or taxi for practices and games, and they won the B.C. senior "B" championship.

The league wasn't the best. Nanaimo talent, already drained by the Shamrocks, was spread over two teams, and the only other entry was Victoria Tugmen. But it was a league, and Bourke figures it was the start of the only feasible plan to save lacrosse on the Island.

"There are youngsters playing lacrosse in Alberni now," he said. "Our minor system in Nanaimo will grow. Eventually, if we could put a team in Courtenay and maybe in Duncan, and get the Shamrocks in with us, we'd be all right."

"The lacrosse wouldn't be great for a while. But it wouldn't be long before we could put up an all-star team to challenge the mainland for the B.C. title. The crowds wouldn't be good, either, but there's a lot of difference between chartering a plane and chartering a bus. We'd get by."

Bourke feels the Shamrocks will have no choice but to come into an Island league sooner or later. But the Nanaimo club won't welcome them with open arms.

"We didn't get the help we expected from them when we fought the league for a travel pool last year," Bourke said. "The league offered us $1,000 and we turned it down. If the Shamrocks had gone with us then we could have forced the issue."

"Well, they didn't. And when the time comes for them to come in with us, they'll come in on our terms."

Rumor has it that mayor Pete Maffeo wants to get an Inter-City League team back in Nanaimo. Inquiries have already been made as to what the Rocks have on Nanaimo players they signed last year.

But the mayor may have trouble convincing the Nanaimo executive. They've made a start at going their own way, and Bourke says they aren't turning back.

And while they struggle in Nanaimo, what happens to the Shamrocks?

Best bet is that they'll battle for a travel pool again, perhaps gain a little concession from the mainland, and struggle and squirm through another season. Heaven only knows where they'll finish.

If they can convince Jack Showers, Billy Gray, Ed Kowalk, Ron Jay and the rest to try it again, it's a start. Ranjit Dillon will be a great asset, but about the only other help they can expect from Junior Shamrocks is John Lauvaas.

"You can't build two winning teams," says manager Hec McNeil. "If we go for the Minto Cup, the juniors stay down and the seniors suffer. If we bring them up, the junior team suffers."

"And most years," he added ruefully, "they stay junior as long as they can."

That's been the problem for years. It used to be considered a thrill just to wear that senior sweater, even if it was worn on the bench, but junior lacrosse is on the upswing now and senior is on the way down. The kids are going with the winners.

This next year, if they can last through it, will be the telling one for Shamrocks. Either they make it, or they may yet have to join that rebuilding plan in Nanaimo.

It would be a step backward, but it might be necessary if there are ever to be any steps the other way.

Vancouver Man Charged With Abduction of Girl

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police Wednesday laid three charges under the abduction section of the Criminal Code against 58-year-old Donald McKay in connection with the 24-hour disappearance of Lori Taylor, 8, a cerebral palsy and epilepsy victim who must take medicine three times a day.

Judge Says Minister Called Them Menace

Vote by Jailed Tories Protested

OTTAWA (CP)—The question of alleged irregularities by Forestry Minister Sauve in the Nov. 8 federal election boiled up suddenly Wednesday at a press conference being given by Acting Prime Minister Martin. Judge Joseph Duguay of Grindstone, Que., has told reporters that Mr. Sauve telephoned him on election day to protest the release of two men from jail to vote. They had been charged that day with threatening a Liberal. Mr. Martin was asked whether Mr. Sauve had telephoned the judge in his riding, Iles-de-la-Madeleine, to have two Conservatives detained in jail. Mr. Martin said he had heard about the matter but hadn't read the newspaper account in question.

Legal Ways

Mr. Martin added that there is a well-established legal procedure for anyone to take if he contends irregularities occurred during the election. He was then asked what would happen if the present making the allegations hadn't enough money to take the matter to court.

Mr. Martin said jokingly—he didn't want to be asked more embarrassing questions. Later, a reporter asked if the government planned to start an investigation. "I know nothing about the situation," Mr. Martin replied.

Another reporter said there had been criticism in the Rivard affair that the government hadn't started its own investigation and that the Opposition had had to disclose it.

Clean House

He asked whether it was still the government's view that the "other side" should "clean house" and not the government itself.

Mr. Martin said the question involves an allegation against a member of Parliament. There were well-known legal remedies to deal with the matter. He added that he wouldn't want to leave the impression that the matter wasn't being looked at by the government.

"Is it?" he was asked. Mr. Martin said he had made only an "observation." Mr. Sauve now is in Rome attending a United Nations Food and Agriculture Conference. On election day, fishermen Willie Lebel and Lucien Bourgeois were arrested as the result of a campaign fracas the previous night. They were allowed out of prison to vote, then returned to their cells.

Britain Hopes to Send

White Peace Force

UN MAY SEIZE DAM FOR DEBT

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain is working toward getting an international force to guard the power station on the Rhodesian side of the Kariba Dam, the authoritative Financial Times says.

The newspaper's foreign editor, writing in an early edition today, says a force composed mainly of British and other "white Commonwealth" troops, perhaps under United Nations auspices, is envisaged.

Zambia urgently appealed to Britain Wednesday for swift military action to neutralize the area around the Kariba Dam.

It is hoped that the British plan will satisfy President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and be acceptable to the breakaway Rhodesian leader, Ian Smith, the newspaper says.

Both will be sounded out by Sir Robert Menzies, the Australian prime minister, "as the Commonwealth statesman least objectionable to the Salisbury regime."

The newspaper says Whitehall circles argue that as Smith now has repudiated Rhodesia's obligation on the £23,600,000 ($70,800,000) World Bank loan for the Kariba project, the United Nations, of which the bank is an agency, is entitled to foreclose.

The UN would accomplish this by putting in troops to guard the Kariba installations. The Financial Times says.

"It is recognized, however, that blue berets (caps worn by soldiers in UN forces) are a red rag to a bull in Rhodesia," The Financial Times says. "So the force would be composed of white troops from Britain and the Commonwealth."

"It would thus provide a reassurance to Mr. Smith that there was no possibility of President Kaunda bringing in African troops, and thus provoking a racial clash across the Zambezi, which could result in the blowing up of the dam."

U.S. Hits Soviet 'Distortion'

New Viet Peace Push

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain is making a new effort to get early peace talks on Viet Nam started, informed sources said Wednesday. The British government sent Russia a draft message on the subject, the sources said. They said Britain wants the message to be circulated by them jointly to the powers who attended the 1954 Geneva conference on Viet Nam. The source declined to disclose the contents of the draft.

Britain and Russia were co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina and Britain supports unconditional Viet Nam peace negotiations.

Warning System Fails

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson was told Wednesday that a power failure Tuesday night at Fort Hardy, B.C., caused an air-raid warning system for 14 minutes. The primary continental warning system was not affected.

The report came from Stewart Brown, chief engineer of the Federal Power Commission, and Boyd Austin, chief of the commission's San Francisco office.

For about 90 minutes there was a loss of power at Fort Hardy to a microwave station, part of a network set up to warn of the approach of unidentified as hostile planes. But the report said other channels were made available within 14 minutes for the alternate system.

Vietnamese Troops In Big Clash

SAIGON (CP)—Massed battalions of South Vietnamese government troops clashed with an estimated 2,000 Viet Cong guerrillas today in a pre-dawn battle about 355 miles north-east of here.

By mid-morning intense fighting was continuing, a U.S. military spokesman said.

No reports were available on casualties but it was thought here that they were heavy among the government force.

Britain has several times proposed to Russia a joint initiative to get Viet Nam peace talks going, but the Soviet government has replied by saying this is a matter for the North Vietnamese.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has deplored as "disappointing" what it called "the extreme distortion" in views expressed by Soviet Premier Kosygin on current world events. (See Page 41.)

A state department press officer also said Wednesday that much of Kosygin's criticism of U.S. policy in Viet Nam and of U.S. efforts to set up a NATO nuclear force including West Germany was essentially old stuff.

Children Will Share $10,000 Settlement

VANCOUVER (CP)—The two children of Mrs. Doris LeCorre, 1170 Palmer, Victoria, will receive $10,000 in an out-of-court settlement for the loss of their father in a 1964 target shooting accident.

The settlement, approved in Supreme Court Wednesday, fol-

Two Islanders Badly Hurt

U.S. Sergeant Dies in Crash

COURTENAY—A United States Air Force staff sergeant, James E. Funkhouser of Ohio, was killed instantly when his sports car was involved in a head-on collision with another car Wednesday.

He was stationed at RCAF Station Comox.

Two persons were injured in the crash.

Carol Ann Manson of Courtenay, a passenger in the serviceman's car, was critically injured. She is in hospital at Comox.

The other driver involved was Ken Day, operator of a music store in Courtenay, who was seriously injured.

The sports car was driving south on the Island highway in heavy rain when it met Day's car head-on. The accident occurred at 3 p.m.

Roland Johnson, counsel for Mrs. LeCorre, said Mr. Peakman was hunting with Mr. Mol and stopped to fire at a tin can. While returning to their firing position, Mr. Mol's rifle accidentally fired and the bullet struck Mr. Peakman in the spine.

He was dead on arrival at Duncan hospital.

Colonist 500 Fund

Turkeys for Toys Only Part of Story

Would you swap a toy, or two or three, for a Christmas turkey?

You can get at least a good chance on that free turkey and help the needy at Christmas, too.

Handing in your toys at the door entitles you to a free ticket to be drawn on about 30 turkeys the Kinmen are donating for this purpose to help the Colonist 500 Fund.

The Kinmen are old friends of the 500 Fund, and this year their bingo is the biggest ever with about $10,000 in prize money and a new Pontiac for the big winner.

And this year — the 43rd year of the bingo — the Kinmen are allowing a $500 consolation prize pot to be divided among the runners-up in the final car bingo.

The consolation prize, and the fun of bingo, of course, would be worth the price of admission alone. Tickets are

Face Deportation

HALIBURY (Reuters)—Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith warned Wednesday that 500,000 foreign workers in Rhodesia will be sent home to Zambia and Malawi to make room for Rhodesians who lose jobs because of British economic sanctions against the breakaway, white-ruled colony.

The warning came in a broadcast in which Smith bitterly attacked British Prime Minister Wilson, whom he accused of having "ripped" Rhodesia's bank reserves.

"As Mr. Wilson has flicked our bank reserves, I am sure he will be happy to accept the responsibility and meet our international financial obligations," he said.

Second Thoughts

Africans Cool To Big Break

By Reuters

Some independent African countries appeared to be having second thoughts Wednesday about a joint weekend decision to break off diplomatic relations with Britain if Ian Smith's Rhodesian regime is not crushed by Dec. 15.

They were also taking a deeper look at their second major decision: The formation of an all-African military force to smash the white regime in Rhodesia.

But in French-speaking Africa, President Maurice Yaméogo of Upper Volta said Wednesday the Organization of African Unity conference had no authority to make a decision on such an important matter as Rhodesia.

In Tunisia, pro-government newspapers said the Addis Ababa conference went too far in its ultimatum to London.

President William Tubman of Liberia said Britain should be given time to handle the Rhodesian crisis, "since Rhodesia is still a British colony."

Reliable informants in Lusaka said Wednesday the Zambian president, Kenneth Kaunda, is warning other African leaders about the difficulties involved in a diplomatic rupture with Britain.

Bells Peal Historic Farewell

Vatican Council Ends with Send-Off by 200,000

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—"Goodbye, Goodbye," a group of waving nuns shouted over the pealing bells of the basilica as the council of bishops hurried out of St. Peter's Square Wednesday.

Minutes earlier Pope Paul VI had solemnly dismissed the ecumenical council fathers with the Latin words "Ite in Pace"—Go in Peace.

But the festive crowd of nearly 200,000 people that thronged St. Peter's Square for the closing ceremony gave the bishops of the world a more informal send-off with waves, smiles and farewells shouted in half a dozen languages.

Pope Paul, a slight figure in a white mitre to the throng standing in the square, sat on a crimson throne in front of the basilica.

On either side of him were the more than 2,000 white-robed council fathers, formally attired official delegations from many nations, and distinguished visitors.

Large as the gathering was, it was almost dwarfed by the massive facade of St. Peter's and the statues silhouetted against the sky that ring the bernini colonnade and the roof of the basilica.

In the vastness of St. Peter's Square white-clad nuns and camera-carrying tourists vied for a better view of the ceremony. Today's feast of the Immaculate Conception is a public holiday and Romans dressed in their Sunday best predominated in the crowd.
